Trooper Hurt Saving Two Women Seized By Maryland Mob

Crowd Disperses, Then Comes Back And Drags Them Through Window

By the Associated Press

Snow Hill, Md. (Wednesday), Feb. 14.—Five State troopers overtook a crowd estimated at 1,000 at nearby Stockton early today and rescued two colored women who had been dragged from the Worcester County Jail here several hours earlier.

The women had been taken into custody yesterday afternoon for "investigation" in connection with the Sunday night slaying of Harvey W. Pilchard, 61, Stockton farmer, and the wounding of his wife, Annie, 57, by three men who entered their home demanding money.

The rescue party started immediately toward Delaware, about 50 miles away, and announced that the women would be brought to Baltimore today for safe keeping.

Sergeant Is Injured

Sergt. W. H. Weber, of the State Police, was painfully injured when the rescue party clashed with the crowd, Gov. O'Conor announced from Annapolis. The Governor said he had received a report that Weber, struck on the head with a club, managed to load the women in an automobile and drove away.

The Governor said an official report to his office placed the crowd at 1,000.

Police said the women were not mistreated at any time and that the crowd bought them food and clothing "in an effort to get them to tell" about Pilchard's slaying.

The crowd dispersed after the rescue.

Two Men Removed

It was reported that one member of the crowd was shot in the leg and another suffered head injuries.

The Governor also announced that two colored men who had been taken into custody had been removed from the jail at Salisbury and taken to some undisclosed place. The whereabouts of the third colored man was not known, and police did not indicate whether a suspect who escaped a posse yesterday was one of those in custody.

Early in the evening the crowd, noisy as it stood about the jail, had battered in a window, attached a rope to a cell block door and ripped it from its fastenings.

The women were placed in automobiles and taken to Stockton, where the crowd was met by the police detail.

Sheriff Faces Crowd.

Pilchard, was killed by a shotgun blast into the stomach, fired by one of the marauders. His wife, was shot in the back as she fled toward the attic. She was reported recovering today in a Salisbury hospital.

Only the jailer, Gordon Bowen, and his wife were in evidence when the crowd attacked the jail.

The women were booked under the names of Martha Blake, 31, and her daughter, Lillian Virginia Blake, 14.

Sheriff Hall had stood with two guns showing in his hip pockets when the crowd assembled, and he shouted, "we've only got two women in here who are being held for questioning in the case." Hall told the crowd, "It's none of your business" where the colored man was being held.

Drag Them Through Window

When the crowd returned later, the screaming women cowered in their cells as a half dozen men smashed through the screened window. They carried a rope and a little while afterward those outside seized the line and began tugging and hauling. Within a few minutes they had got the women from their

Children Boarded Out Face Social and Emotional Perils

By Lucia Giddens

The plight of babies who fall into the hands of brokers is only one side of the story. Another side, less spectacular, perhaps, but serious, is the danger which may befall some of the older children who are being cared for, away from their own homes.

"I know private foster family homes where the behavior of the members of the family and the relation between them create an atmosphere positively poisonous to the children who live there. I could describe a small boarding school, several of whose pupils have been known to me personally, where dirt, hunger and blows are the lot of the pupils," said Miss Mildred Terrett, executive secretary of the Children's Protective Association.

The proposed licensing legislation, which would banish the commercialization of baby-placing, also would introduce a

Kennedy Out of Race For President

Definitely Withdraws Name, Feels It Is His Duty to Stay in London

Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy last night definitely took his name out of consideration for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

While steps were being taken in Massachusetts to obtain a slate of Kennedy-pledged delegates to the Democratic national convention, the Ambassador, a resident of Boston, issued a statement here saying the "paramount consideration of public duty" compelled him to remain out of the political contest.

The move for a Kennedy delegation had been characterized as designed to "cause confusion" by supporters of Postmaster General

Republican Wins Seat in House Held by Pierce

Malone, N. Y., Feb. 13 (AP).—Clarence E. Kilburn, Malone Republican, emerged victorious tonight in a special election to succeed the late Wallace E. Pierce, Plattsburg Republican, as Representative from the Thirty-first Congressional District.

With only 22 scattered rural districts yet unreported, Kilburn led his Democratic opponent, M. Henry McGillic, Massena, by 14,957 to 6,185.

Kilburn, in a pre-election statement, asserted he was "not in the least in sympathy with the New Deal."

Goldsborough To Aid Fight On Baby Sales

Justice Would Tell Congress of Need For Remedial Law

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of the District Court yesterday repledged his cooperation in ending commercialization of baby placements in the District.

He said he would be willing to go before the Senate and House District Committees "to state why such legislation is needed."

Last summer he urged the passage of legislation to prevent this form of commercialism, and gave impetus to the movement. Developments were rapid in the past few days, with the House District Committee's demand for an investigation of exposures made in The Washington Post series, "Babies for Sale."

"The situation is bad when it permits individuals or a set of individuals to commercialize on the adoption of children," Justice Goldsborough said yesterday. "It is bound to result in evil.

"We ought to see to it that no one would have charge of adoptions except recognized salaried agencies not financially interested in the adoptions."

Justice Goldsborough has conferred with Mrs. Olive W. Swinney, secretary of the child welfare division of the Council of Social Agencies, and Mrs. Herbert N. Budlong, chairman of the division's legislative subcommittee which is drafting proposed legislation for licensing of child-placement and child-caring agencies.

"I looked over the tentative draft of the bill, which I thought was

Bondy Calls Home for Aged A 'Second-Hand' Institution

The House subcommittee investigating local welfare institutions will complete taking testimony on the Home for the Aged and Infirm tomorrow, Chairman D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, said yesterday, and will turn its attention to the Children's Receiving Home.

Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, will be one of the first witnesses in the second phase of the inquiry.

Shortly after Robert E. Bondy, public welfare director, described the Home for the Aged as a "second-hand institution," Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, injected the Blue Plains complaint into the Senate debate over the Finnish loan.

Senator Reynolds suggested Congress would do better to keep American money at home to aid unemployment and remedy conditions such as those at Blue Plains. Reynolds is a member of the Senate District Committee.

Bondy was complimented by Chairman D'Alesandro as "a man who knows his job" following his testimony, and his recommendations were indorsed by Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Public Welfare Board, who added, however, that he thought all sick inmates at

Spreads Payments

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Only the signature of President Roosevelt is necessary to assure District residents the choice of making income tax payments in installments as the Senate yesterday passed the House-approved bill and sped it to the White House.

Acting immediately upon receipt of the measure, which the House passed Monday, Chairman King of the Senate District Committee polled the committee, reported the bill, and then called it up under unanimous consent.

The legislation, which is expected to be signed by the President, will not only spread out the tax payments, but will postpone the final day for filing the return from March 15 to April 15. The second installment may be postponed until October 15.

District May Borrow Funds

To forestall a deficit in the District budget, the measure authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to advance money to the city if needed.

While District officials were alarmed by the prospect of having 42,000 potential taxpayers eliminated by amendment to the act, as now threatened in the House, Senator King declined to predict what stand he will take.

He indicated, however, that he will be guided by the recommendations of the Commissioners should the House vote to exempt Federal employes who maintain legal residences in the States.

Meanwhile, it was explained at the District Building that United States workers who reside in suburban Virginia and vote in another State, as many do, will be subject to triple taxation if the Virginia Legislature adopts a bill now before it to extend the State income tax to resident Federal employes.

"And Congress won't be able to do a thing about that, either," one District official commented.

Pond Warning Recalled

While members of the House District Committee talked of reviving the Pond revenue formula in lieu of the present income tax, a warning carried in the Pond report when submitted in January, 1939, was recalled.

At that time the Supreme Court had not held Federal employes subject to State income tax laws. Dr. Chester B. Pond, New York tax expert, and Colin F. Stam, chief of staff of the joint committee on internal revenue taxation, recommended a combination sales tax of

Finns Pressed Back, Ask Help; Senate Votes $20,000,000 Aid; Great New Red Army Massing

Similar Credit Will Go to China; Export Bank Capital Boosted 100 Million

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Additional nonmilitary credit up to $20,000,000 each for both Finland and China yesterday was tacitly approved by a 49-to-27 Senate vote.

The bill increased Export-Import Bank capital by $100,000,000 to make possible the loans, but mentioned neither nation by name.

It was the Senate's second gesture of aid to the besieged Baltic republic. Only last week the chamber went on record in favor of expeditious SEC consideration of any plan to float a Finnish bond issue privately in this country.

Swift House Action Forecast

The Export-Import Bank measure was messaged to the House, where leaders forecast swift action.

Senate passage followed three days of debate, with opponents of the bill launching a futile last-minute attack. They labeled Finnish aid the "entering wedge" for loans to other warring nations.

Leaders denied the loans threatened American neutrality or opened the way for credit to either Britain or France.

To criticism that the bill lacked specific direction for loans to Finland, sponsors cited testimony by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones implying that he would advance further credit if the bill were passed.

"Let there be no mistake," Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, told the Senate, "a vote for this bill is a vote for a loan to Finland."

Seated alone in the diplomatic gallery, Hjalmar Procope, Finland's Minister to the United States, heard the closing Senate arguments.

Both Brown, the bill's author and Foreign Relations Chairman Pittman contended no cash would pass to Finland but the money would be paid here to farmers and manufacturers supplying the needed goods.

Both party and traditional isolationist lines broke on the final count. Voting for the measure were 38 Democrats, 9 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 Progressive. Against passage were 16 Democrats, 9 Republicans, 1 Independent and 1 Farmer-Laborite.

Just before passage, the Senate defeated 50 to 27 an amendment by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, to cut the proposed $100,000,000 increase in Export-Import Bank capital to $50,000,000.

Another amendment by Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, prohibiting any loans to foreign governments as such, was rejected by a voice vote.

While the Senate was debating Finnish relief, Secretary of State

Another Soviet Army Rolling Toward Finnish Frontier

By Frank L. Kluckhohn.
Copyright by New York Times.

A new Soviet army is being transported northward from three Russian areas toward the Finnish frontier, apparently in preparation of the biggest Russian drive of the war.

According to information reaching diplomatic circles here last night the largest mass movement of Soviet troops, artillery and tanks since the early days of the Soviet-Finnish struggle is under way within Russia. Heavy troop movements from the Ukraine and White Russia toward Finland's Mannerheim Line are in full progress, while additional mechanized units are on the way from Moscow.

With Soviet artillery bombarding Finnish positions on the Karelian Isthmus, the new jamming of Soviet rail lines converging toward the fighting front leads diplomatic observers in Washington to believe that the Stalin government is preparing to employ the full force of Russia's man power in a steam-roller attempt to smash the defense and follow up.

The reports led to the belief that the heavy fighting of the last 13 days is a prelude to a greater Soviet drive with as little rest as posible permitted to the Finns through the steady pounding of Soviet artillery.

Coincidentally other reports reached this capital that Britain and France are preparing 3 divisions —1 Polish, 1 French and 1 Canadian —for possible transport to the Finnish front should the Soviet attack succeed or should Germany intervene in Scandinavia. It was emphasized that these reports could not be substantiated and they were denied in French and British circles here.

The weakening of Soviet forces in the Ukraine and other points for purposes of the Finnish campaign was not matched by movement of

Committee Slashes Roosevelt Figure By $111,699,699

By John G. Norris

American warships bigger than any in the world were demanded by the House Appropriations Committee in bringing a $966,772,878 naval supply bill to the floor yesterday.

The measure, a record total for peacetime, was lashed $111,699,699 below President Roosevelt's estimates, much of the cut coming from funds for shipbuilding.

Immediately, President Roosevelt objected to elimination of funds for laying down two battleships and expressed hope that the Senate would restore the appropriation.

Initial Sums in Bill

Desire of the committee to economize and at the same time prescribe a policy of larger—and more costly —ships led it to curtail estimates for the two battleships and two cruisers to just enough for the preparation of plans for the craft.

The Navy wants to build 45,000 ton dreadnaughts and 10,000-ton cruisers now, and perhaps larger craft later, a policy which the committee condemned as "imitation of other nations."

"The committee is of the opinion," declared its report, "that definite advantage will be secured by making the new capital ships and the additional cruisers not equal to, but superior to, any pending foreign construction. . . ."

Two Bills Signed

The committee favors the construction of these ships and is including initial appropriations for them in the bill as presented, but has reduced the amount available. These amounts should permit the department to proceed with plans for these ships, but it is the suggestion of the committee that before proceeding with construction it should be determined that the contemplated plans will provide ships which will be superior to

Italy, Hungary Will Unite, Madrid Hears

Diplomats Report Protectorate Like Albania in Store

By the United Press

Madrid, Feb. 13.—Representatives of the governments of Italy and Hungary are believed to be considering the possibility of a union similar to that between Italy and Albania, at least for the duration of the European war, it was reported in diplomatic circles here tonight.

Diplomats close to Italian and Hungarian officials said they understood that the union, if brought about, would make the King-Emperor of Italy, Victor Emmanuel, temporary titular ruler of Hungary.

The plan was discussed during the recent conference in Venice between the Italian and Hungarian foreign ministers, according to informants.

Additional details were referred to the Hungarian general staff, members of which, accompanied by technicians, now are reported to be with Italian army leaders.

The informants understood approval of the Hungarian parliament would be necessary.

They said Hungarian Regent Admiral Horthy was favorable to a proposed union.

Russia Claims Gains

By Harold Denny
Copyright by New York Times

Helsinki, Feb. 13.—The Soviet offensive on the isthmus has now reached such intensity that the Finnish army is fighting with its back to the wall to prevent a break through which would lay the heart of the country open to the Russians.

Tonight, for the first time, fear was openly expressed in responsible quarters that the slender Finnish forces might not be able to stem this terrific Russian tide and that unless decisive aid arrived Finland might fall despite all her earlier victories.

The Karelian Isthmus has now become Finland's Verdun.

"They shall not pass," is the determination of the Finnish defenders, for should the Mannerheim Line across the Isthmus be broken the Russians would have the war won, all but the mopping up.

Russians Claim 84 Forts

[The Soviet communique covering Tuesday's fighting claimed the capture of 23 more Finnish Mannerheim Line forts, or a total of 84 of these positions in the last five days, the Associated Press reported.

[The Finns had denied previous Russian claims of the capture of 16 positions Sunday, and 13 last Thursday. The Russians also claimed 32 were taken Monday, but the Finnish communique covering Monday's fighting obliquely acknowledged some "withdrawals" by reporting recapture of all "important" positions.

[The Russians' Tuesday communique said Finnish counterattacks had been beaten back with "severe losses" for the Finns.—Editor's note.]

"We Need More Men"

The seriousness with which the new military situation is regarded in the highest quarters was revealed here late tonight in a special verbal communique to foreign correspondents by a spokesman of the Finnish general staff.

"In spite of the fact that the Russians are falling in tens of thousands they always have more men to put in. That is why we need help. We need more men, more guns, more airplanes.

"Thus far Finland has been able to hold on but we rely on other civilized nations to do their utmost to relieve us in this situation."

Today saw the heaviest fighting which has yet occurred in the battle of the isthmus, the Russians evidently having moved up new infantry to replace the men lost in their earlier reckless attacks. They also have added to the heavy concentration of artillery on this front so that they are able to keep up a steady drum fire on the Finnish positions day and night.

Soviet attacks are made without regard to losses. A company is sent forward. It advances as far as it can. When it is finished another

Maryland Students Condemn American Youth Congress

The Diamondback Says Organization Is 'Unconstructive'

The University of Maryland student paper yesterday published a front-page editorial condemning the American Youth Congress and boasting that "so-called youth movements never have made the slightest headway on the Maryland campus."

Allan C. Fisher, editor of the Diamondback, semiweekly publication, wrote the editorial, which asserted:

"The American Youth Congress is unconstructive in its program and renders mere lip service to democracy, the system it claims to support. The whole attitude of the group is one of criticism—a self-assured criticism that is intolerant of opposition or restraint and suggests no remedial measures. Its ill-informed leaders mask rash judgment and lack of insight behind the so-called impetuosity of youth. There is an old saying, 'If you must use a hammer, build with it.' The American Youth Congress has never realized the truth of this or attempted to give it a try."

Referring to membership of the Young Communistic League in the congress, the editorial stated:

"You cannot harness communism and expect it to work for democracy. The first is the avowed enemy of the second, and if the congress thinks it is working with communism, it will soon find it is working for communism."

Some students expressed lukewarm support of the congress, but the sentiment was mostly unfavora-

Blood Bank Fund Drive Passes $1,000; Many Parties Slated

The Post-WJSV blood and serum bank fund for Children's Hospital passed the $1,000 mark yesterday.

Although relatively few of the hundreds of benefit parties scheduled have been held to date, a St. Valentine Eve tally yesterday revealed that $766.55 has been received by The Post and an additional $249.50 in voluntary contributions collected by Children's Hospital.

The total is well ahead of last year's figure at the same stage of the campaign, indicating that the 1940 "Have a Heart" drive for the institution's blood and serum bank will have raised far more than the $2,500 of 1939 when all precincts have been tabulated.

Last night's benefit bridges and card parties included those of the Federal Bridge League, Third Division A. E. F. Society and James Reese Europe post auxiliary, American Legion, as well as numerous parties in private homes.

Forty-eight players in the Federal Bridge League gathered around a dozen tables in the Wardman Park Hotel for one of the large parties of the evening. Proceeds to be con-

Ruling Sought On NLRB's Alleged Lobby

Committee to Ask If Criminal Code Has Been Violated

By John B. Oakes

The Smith Committee investigating the Labor Board, yesterday decided to ask Attorney General Jackson whether the board has violated the criminal code of the United States in respect to lobbying.

The question was raised by Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland after he had brought out in testimony of Board Chairman J. Warren Madden, Edwin S. Smith, board member, and Nathan Witt, board secretary, that the NLRB had sanctioned efforts of its employes to organize pressure on Congress to restore cuts made in appropriations for the agency in 1937 and 1938.

Asserting that the question of law violation is one "for others to decide," Toland attempted to put in the record a provision of the criminal code that forbids Federal employes from using Government funds to lobby to influence members of Congress.

But on motion of Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, the committee went into executive session and ordered stricken from the record the references to possible violation of the law.

Declaring that he would ask the Attorney General "as to just what does constitute a violation of the law with respect to lobbying," Chairman Smith observed that "I think it is perhaps a matter of common knowledge that departments and agencies of the Government have a custom of doing a good deal of lobbying when their appropriations are at stake."

Smith said that "the committee differs somewhat as to the construction of the statute," and observed that some of the committee members "think this is a good time to . . . find out what the law is."

Representative Smith said last night that the committee's action was intended not as a move toward prosecution of Board members but rather as a warning to all Government agencies.

In addition to evidence of alleged lobbying by the board, yesterday's testimony revealed that Chairman Madden had tried to prevent the Government from making contracts with companies accused of violation of the Wagner Act—in one instance before the board had held a hearing on the case.

To Toland's accusation that Madden was trying to "blackjack" the companies, the board chairman retorted that he was urging the Government to undertake "a sensible piece of self-protection."

Admitting that the Wagner Act gave the board authority to take such action, Madden explained that he felt it was "a perfectly ridiculous situation" if the Government was unable to refuse to make contracts with alleged law-violators, even if they were low bidders.

Toland introduced a letter Madden wrote to the Procurement Division of the Treasury in 1936, concerning a New York City window-shade manufacturer charged by its employes with violation of the Wagner Act.

Madden wrote that "the preliminary investigation" of the board had led to an issuance of a complaint against the company, and he asked the procurement division "to cooperate with our work to the extent of not giving the benefits of Government contracts to persons and companies who violate other Federal laws."

Nearly 7 in 10 Favor Banning Sale Of Armaments to the Japanese

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 13.—Should the United States forbid the sale of war materials to Japan?

DR. GALLUP

The Pittman resolution, calling for such an embargo, is pending in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and many organized groups advocate its passage. Others oppose an embargo on the grounds that it would only lead to further strained relations and trouble with Japan. To get some indication of where public sentiment lies in this controversy, the American Institute of Public Opinion has just completed a national survey.

The results show that a majority of voters polled—nearly 7 in every 10—favor shutting off the American export of war equipment and military supplies to the Japanese, even if it may cause further troubled relations between the two countries. Since the pros and cons of such an embargo have not been extensively debated in public or its implications full explored, the distinct possibility exists that sentiment may change as discussion continues. The results of the polls are significant in so far as they indicate (1) the extent of American opposition to the Japanese policy in China, and (2) the general tendency of sentiment at the moment to favor the advocates, rather than the opponents, of a Japanese embargo. However, the vote for embargo is less today than it was last summer.

The issue put to voters by the Institute in Natien-wide interviews was as follows:

"Do you think our Government should forbid the sale of arms, airplanes, gasoline and other war materials to Japan?"

Those with opinions voted as follows:

Yes	75%
No	25

An interesting feature of the survey was the low proportion of no opinion or undecided vote. Only about 1 person in every 20 (6 per cent) expressed no sentiment on the matter.

In an earlier survey on the embargo reported by the Institute last August, 82 per cent of voters questioned favored an embargo, while 18 per cent were opposed.

Today's study in public opinion is chiefly significant in relation to what surveys have already found about public sentiment on the Japanese-Chinese conflict. In the course of a half-dozen studies on the issue in recent years, the institute has found a growing hostility of sentiment toward Japan.

American Sentiment Toward Japanese

Today's Institute report is the latest of a series of studies in the last two years showing public opinion on the war in the Orient. A summary of some of the earlier studies follows:

"In the present fight between Japan and China, are your sympathies with either side?"

September, 1937.

JAPAN	2%
CHINA	47
NEITHER	51

June, 1939.

JAPAN	2%
CHINA	74
NEITHER	24

"Would you join a movement in this country to stop buying goods made in Japan?"

	October, 1937.	June, 1939.
Favor Boycott	37%	66%
Oppose Boycott	63	34

"Do you approve of Secretary Hull's action in serving notice on Japan that the United States may end its trade treaty with Japan in six months." (July, 1939.)

APPROVE	81%
DISAPPROVE	19

"Do you think the United States should forbid shipment of arms or ammunitions from this country to China?" (June, 1939.)

YES	40%

REPORTED TODAY

"Do you think our Government should forbid the sale of arms, airplanes, gasoline and other war materials to Japan?"

YES	75%
NO	25

Two and a half years ago, a boycott of Japanese goods was favored by only a minority; by last year boycott sentiment had grown to the point where two-thirds of the voters were in favor of a movement to stop buying Japanese goods. And as the Japanese-Chinese war progressed, public sympathy with China increased sharply, the latest study showing voters expressing sympathy with China by a proportion of 37 to 1.

When Secretary Hull denounced the Japanese-American trade treaty last June, a survey showed the Nation 8 to 2 in favor of the move.

The main reason for anti-Japanese sentiment is revealed time and again in the Institute's interviews with citizens throughout the country. It is not because the voters have any particular antipathy toward the Japanese as a people, but because the Japanese are considered in the public mind the aggressors in the Far Eastern war.

A deep-seated hostility toward aggression, no matter in what part of the globe, is one of the dominant factors in American public opinion today, and one which colors sentiment on any number of specific issues. This hatred of aggression is not confined to the case of Japan; it expresses itself in antipathy toward the Nazis in their war against England and France and toward Soviet Russia in her war with Finland.

Forest Service Transfer Plan Reported Dead

Capitol Opposition Presaged Defeat, Roosevelt Is Told

President Roosevelt last night was reliably reported to have abandoned plans for transfer of the United States Forest Service from the Agriculture Department to the Department of Interior in his forthcoming reorganization plan No. 3.

His decision not to press for the shift at this session is said to have been reached after influential Senators and House members advised him of strong Congressional opposition.

The President was told the transfer was likely to precipitate the first serious fight since Congress voted him wide reorganization powers and would probably end in defeat of the project.

Two Plans Under Study

Meanwhile, the President told reporters at his press conference that he will send Congress no reorganization plans prior to March 15. Two plans are under study, one dealing only with intradepartment mergers and the other with bureau shifts between departments. The Forest Service transfer was under study as part of the latter.

Reported abandonment of the transfer at least for this session climaxed a long struggle between Secretary of Interior Ickes and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, each seeking control of the agency.

The battle raged for years previous to their administrations.

Ickes Had Edge

Recently the President had been reported siding with Ickes, and ready to recommend the transfer back to the Interior Department, from which it was removed by President Theodore Roosevelt.

An article published in The Post January 19 about plans to proceed with the shift precipitated a strong protest movement, in which the American Forestry Association, all the major farm organizations and other interested organizations joined.

At the Capitol it was said members of Congress opposed to the shift were assured by leaders it was not contemplated at the time Congress passed the reorganization bill. Arguments for the transfer are said to have been advanced by the President at a recent White House legislative conference. His leaders told him that it would be difficult to obtain congressional approval.

Involved are 161 national forests containing 175,000,000 acres, and a Washington and field personnel of some 5,000 employes. Congressional critics contend forest land conservation is primarily a farm problem and oppose projected Interior Department centralization of both forest and park land control.

Ickes Reported Using FBI to Trace 'Leak'

By Felix Cotten.

Interior Secretary Ickes was reported yesterday to have called in the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an attempt to clear up a controversy over the source of a "leak" concerning his ouster of Dr. John W. Finch as director of the Bureau of Mines.

Interior Department officials denied knowledge of the FBI having been called in but Justice officials were noncommittal. It was explained the G-men would not talk in event services were performed for another department.

Joseph H. Hedges, assistant to the director and chief of the bureau's administrative branch, has been transferred to the bureau's station at College Park, Md., as a mining engineer.

It was reported his salary had been cut in half. Interior officials said they knew nothing about a salary cut. Hedges refused to say whether his salary had been reduced, or to make any comments.

Finch Ouster Followup

The transfer, it was learned, was in the nature of a followup to the Finch ouster. Ickes announced he had asked Finch to resign because he lacked "iron in his blood." He said Finch allowed a "bureaucratic clique" to run the bureau, and he intimated this "clique" was trying to sabotage some of his policies.

He criticized the civil service on the ground it encouraged growth of such cliques, but he added that, "with all its defects," he favored "more civil service instead of less."

Hedges was selected through a civil service examination in 1926 for the position of assistant to the director, and had held the position since that time.

Charles W. Henderson, head of the regional office of the bureau at Denver, has been transferred to Washington to take Hedges' place as assistant to the director, at least temporarily.

Anonymous Letters Checked

Dr. Arno C. Fieldner, chief of the technological branch of the bureau, is serving as acting director pending appointment of a successor to Finch.

Participation by the FBI in Ickes' troubles with the bureau is reported to have resulted from the circulation of anonymous letters purporting to relate the substance of a conversation between Ickes and Finch at the time Finch was asked for his resignation.

Ickes has made known his belief it was through these letters his ouster of Finch became known. He objected to certain statements in the letters, such as an assertion that he referred to some bureau officials as "Hooverites."

He is reported to have accused certain ones of Finch's friends in the bureau of responsibility for the letters.

These individuals knew of the conversation between Ickes and Finch at the time the latter's resignation was requested, it was said.

They denied the accusation, however, and, according to reports, it was either at their request or because of their protests that the FBI was asked to check the evidence.

This is reported to have been done by running down fingerprints on one or more of the anonymous letters. It is represented as having been largely a laboratory job by the FBI. Although Interior Department officials say the persons responsible still are unknown, the fingerprints are said not to have conformed to those of bureau officials Ickes originally accused.

All Is Confusion On the Income Tax Front

D. C., Maryland, Va. Levies Are Subject To Change Sans Notice

"Subject to change without notice," is the warning that must be appended to the line-up and batting order on income tax laws in the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Last night, however, the requirements as to time of filing returns, the date of payment and who shall pay in the three jurisdictions, made this picture:

In the District

Date of payment is only nominally March 15, inasmuch as the Senate passed a bill already approved by the House, providing for semiannual payments of the local income tax, on April 15 and October 15, one-half of the total to be paid on each date. The bill needs only Presidential signature to become law.

Persons who must pay are all those who were "domiciled" here on December 31, 1939, the end of the last taxable year. Exceptions are the President, Vice President, Members of Congress and persons in the Federal foreign and military services detailed to Washington.

Another exception are those persons who are here for a limited, even though "undetermined" period.

Persons here for an "indefinite" duration, however, are subject to the local tax, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, has declared.

A similar ruling, however, is now being contested in the District Court of Appeals by Justice Department Attorney James J. Sweeney, with reference to an intangible personal property tax be paid of $1.49. Although the personal property tax is no longer on the books, the issue of residence to be decided in the test case may apply as well to the income tax. Sweeney contends that his legal residence is Boston, to which he will return, but after an "indefinite" period here.

Members of Congress have declared they will take steps to prevent Federal employes here who have legal residences in their home States and pay State income taxes, from being taxed again by the District.

In the meantime, however, this group of persons is instructed to pay the local tax and accompany the return with a protest, blanks for which may be obtained in the District tax office.

Income from a District government or Federal Government salary is subject to taxation.

In Maryland:

Returns are due for the Maryland State income tax, and the entire amount is payable March 15.

Federal salaries, as well as State salaries, are subject to the levy.

In Virginia:

Returns are due June 1, and the total payment of the Virginia State income tax is due on or before December 5.

At present, the compensation of Federal employes is exempted from the levy. A bill is now pending in the State Legislature, however, to make Federal salaries subject to the State tax. The State attorney general has advised that the bill is constitutional.

In all jurisdictions, the Federal income tax is payable in four equal installments, the first to be made with the return March 15, and the other quarters on June 15, September 15 and December 15.

Compensation from Federal or State salaries is subject to the Federal tax.

Roosevelt Favors Full Information To Aid Democracy

President Roosevelt said yesterday that one of the safeguards of democracy is full publicity as to what is going on in the world.

He was asked at his press conference what he thought of the idea of teaching American democracy in American schools in the same way that naziism and communism are taught in Germany and Russia.

He replied that the general principle of freedom of information ought to be extended to the curricula of the schools. The President said he believed democracy could be encouraged by freedom of information.

Ickes Scores Elliott on Cafes, Calls Solution Simple Matter

Acting Comptroller Declines Comment On Secretary's Attack

Secretary of Interior Ickes has written a blistering rebuke to Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott, it was learned yesterday, denouncing the contents and procedure of Elliott's recent report on the operations of cafeterias in Federal buildings.

"No comment at this time," was Elliott's only rejoinder.

Commenting on Elliott's recommendation that the Government lease the cafeterias to private concessionaires, Ickes wrote, "I wonder if any representations have been made to you by a restaurant association, which for a number of years has been endeavoring to secure contracts in Government buildings?"

In his letter, written Monday, Ickes said the solution to the problem of cafeteria operation by the non-profit Welfare and Recreational Association, condemned as illegal by Elliot, was no simpler "even if your policy of killing the patient is adopted."

He wrote that he was also "wondering" if the persons who drafted Elliott's report had not "become entangled in the maze they created."

The Secretary's own solution, proposed in the letter, is at sharp variance with a program offered recently to the association by Federal Works Administrator Carmody, it was learned yesterday.

Association Revision Urged

Carmody's suggestion, following the lines of a report carried by The Post January 17, was to reconstitute the association as a Government body which would operate the cafeterias. The association's trustee board, reported to be overwhelmingly opposed to the idea, will discuss it at a meeting today.

Ickes' proposal was to obtain Congressional "legalization" of Federal contracts with the association, held invalid by Elliott, and to allow the continuance of its present operations.

In his report of January 29, Elliott condemned the association for numerous alleged illegalities, declared that it operated without legal sanction, and recommended that its $3,000,000 assets be taken over by the Government and the properties be operated either by the Government or be let to private bidders.

Ickes said he shared joint responsibility with Carmody in the association's operations in the past and felt he would be "remiss . . . if I did not express an opinion of your action."

Ickes Lauds Organization

"It is, of course," Ickes wrote Elliott, "not only your prerogative but apparently, at times, your practice to make an investigation, reach your conclusions, and announce them without first consulting the persons affected.

"It is a habit I deplore."

Warm in his praise of the association's past operations, Ickes said he would prefer to close the cafeteria in the Interior Department, "rather than submit to private operation." Prior to operations by the association, he added, three private concessionaires in the department cafeteria "went bankrupt afte ra few years of serving poor food at high prices."

Pendergast's City Machine Broken, 5 to 1

Kansas City Reduces All Official's Terms; They Go Out in April

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Feb. 13.—Tom Pendergast's once-powerful Democratic machine was routed at every turn in today's special election.

It offered no resistance to a charter amendment to end its rule at the city hall in April and rallied little support for a proposal to put firemen under civil service. Four other propositions drafted by one of its councilmen also were defeated.

Boss Tom and several of his lieutenants are in Leavenworth prison for dodging income taxes.

More than 110,000 of 192,000 registered voters struck with ballots at the political organization which boodled the city of millions of dollars. They ordered, by a five to one majority, an amendment to end the terms of all elective officials April 17 by reducing their tenure from four to two years. They smashed four machine-fostered amendments by the same majority.

The firemen's civil service plan failed of passage by almost two to one.

Antimachine forces opposed the proposition on the theory the city charter—ignored under Pendergast rule—provides civil service and the measure under good government would be merely a hindrance.

Not in 15 years has the machine, which once controlled State as well as city politics and even had a finger in national affairs, been found so flat on its back.

Even in its own stronghold precincts, where the vote was light, the returns favored the cleanup movement. It was the quietest election in recent Kansas City history.

Although more than a dozen arrests were made by police, no complaints were made to officers by the election board.

Goldsborough To Aid Baby Fight

very good." Justice Goldsborough said yesterday.

Justice Goldsborough told Mrs. Swinney and Mrs. Budlong that "whenever they felt there is sufficient unanimity in the District to justify it, I would like to cooperate with them in connection with the legislation."

Probe by Bondy Urged

Meanwhile Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, advised Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, to make an investigation of the operations of baby brokers as disclosed in the "Babies for Sale" articles in The Washington Post.

During a cross-examination of the welfare director, who was testifying at the welfare inquiry on conditions at the Children's Receiving Home, D'Alesandro asked:

"What about the racket of selling babies here in the District?"

Bondy explained that the matter had been referred to a subcommittee of the House District Committee for investigation, which had directed Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to make a report.

"It seems to me that the welfare department ought to be looking into this matter also," D'Alesandro replied. "I am very fond of babies, and this is a terrible thing to be occurring in the National Capital."

Difficulties Cited

D'Alesandro added that "it seems like everything is wrong with the board of public welfare everywhere you turn.

"When it gets down to handling people like children, it's bad. I think you should do something about it."

Bondy pointed out that the board of public welfare had no authority to control sale of babies in the District.

Ginger Rogers Finally Decides To Divorce Ayres This Spring

Now Plans Reno Trip After Next Picture Which Begins Mar. 1

By Louella O. Parsons,
International News Service Staff Writer

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Ginger Rogers finally has made up her mind to divorce Lew Ayers, she said today.

"Lew and I have been separated for three years and I am leaving for Reno as soon as my studio schedule gives me enough time to establish a residence in Nevada. It probably will be after my next picture, which starts on March 1," she said.

Hollywood long has wondered why Ginger and Lew postponed their divorce, since there is no chance of a reconciliation. While they are the best of friends and have dined together on several occasions, both have insisted there wasn't a chance to patch up their matrimonial troubles.

A few months ago Lew was seen with pretty Helen Gilbert, a newcomer on the M.-G.-M. lot, where he is making a comeback. It has been said that after she obtains a divorce he too probably would get his freedom and marry her. Since that time, however, Helen has been seen more frequently with Vic Orsatti.

At the time of the parting of Ginger and Lew the fact he had slipped from the place he won with "All Quiet on the Western Front," while Ginger forged ahead steadily, was said to be responsible for their parting.

Ginger's name has been linked with that of Howard Hughes the millionaire aviator, who once again is interested in producing pictures in Hollywood, but suggestions of any romantic interest are ridiculed by Ginger's friends.

N. Y. Official, Tammany Chief Arrested as Extortionists

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 13.—William Solomon, influential Tammany district leader, and Charles H. Mullens, Republican assistant deputy State comptroller, were arrested today on an indictment accusing them of having extorted $34,833 for negotiating $750,000 in State contracts for the Burland Printing Co., Inc.

They were taken into custody in the office of District Attorney Dewey when they arrived there, with counsel, at the prosecution's request. Both pleaded innocent to a seven-point indictment, specifically charging bribery, extortion and taking unlawful fees, and bail for each was fixed at $10,000.

It was the second serious accusation made this week against Solomon, who has been one of the most powerful Tammany bosses since Dewey convicted District Leader James J. Hines last February for conspiracy in the operation of the old Dutch Schultz numbers racket.

Testifies of "Payoff"

Testifying yesterday in the current labor rackets trial of Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, Max Rubin swore he gave $1,500 to Solomon as part of the "payoff" to settle a bakery strike. That accusation was not related to Solomon's indictment.

The indictment sprang from an investigation of alleged irregularities in State printing contracts, which annually total about $2,000,000, being made by Dewey's office parallel to a similar State-wide inquiry ordered by Gov. Lehman.

At the same time that Dewey's office disclosed its action against Solomon and Mullens, it was announced that Julius Weinstein, treasurer of the Burland company, and another of its officers had been indicted in connection with their personal State income taxes for 1937.

Company Head Named

The second Burland executive was the company president, Charles C. Walsey, whose name was withheld until he was placed under arrest at his home tonight. Both he and Weinstein were accused specifically of having reported incomes of $16,600 when they should have been stated as $46,600. Weinstein pleaded innocent; Walsey will not be arraigned for several days because of illness.

The Solomon-Mullens indictment pictured the assistant deputy comptroller as the actual arranger of Burland contracts, from the State temporary emergency relief administration and the State department of social welfare, and described Solomon as having helped and encouraged him. Solomon was not accused of having received any of the money.

Stull to Speak

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will speak before the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association at 8 o'clock tonight in the Woodridge branch library, 2206 Rhode Island avenue northeast. Stull will discuss relations between the federation and member associations.

5th D. C. Radio Station Planned

Lawrence J. Heller, 46, local attorney, yesterday was granted permission to build a new Washington commercial radio station.

The Federal Communications Commission announced that Heller's permit called for construction of a station to operate on 1,310 kilocycles with 250-watt power, and a 50-watt amplifier or "booster" station.

Heller said he hopes to have the station on the air within six months, and that he plans to finance it himself. The cost, he estimated, will be more than $50,000.

Location of studio and transmitters for the projected station remain to be decided, with approval of the FCC, Heller said. The main transmitter will be in downtown Northwest Washington, and the booster station on Wisconsin avenue near River road northwest.

The new station would bring to five the total of Washington's commercial radio stations. In operation now are WMAL and WRC, of the National Broadcasting sytem; WJSV of the Columbia Broadcasting system, and WOL of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

Heller said that his station "will operate on a commercial basis," but will devote considerable time to civic local programs, and to the development of latent local talent. Musical programs by local orchestras, and productions by Washington dramatic groups were listed by Heller as projects for the new station.

German Army Chief Visits Baltic Ports

Observers Link Tour With Possible Thrust at Sweden

By Percival Knauth.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 13.—While his troops on the Western Front passed through another inactive day, Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German armed forces, inspected territories which five months ago constituted a vital part of Germany's eastern front.

Accompanied by Lieut. Gen. Fedor von Bock, he toured Danzig, Neustadt and Gotenhafen "in order to get a first-hand view of the military reconstruction work in these sectors."

Neutrals Speculate

The visit was treated by the German press as a matter of routine, but aroused lively speculation among neutral observers.

Seen in connection with renewed warnings directed to neutrals concerning the dangers inherent in "unneutral" neutrality, and particularly, in connection with constant tirades against Great Britain for her efforts to "extend the war-zone into Scandinavia," it takes on particular significance.

Both Danzig and Gotenhafen—formerly known as Gdynia—have now become important German military harbors.

[Because of their location at the eastern end of the Baltic Sea, both of these ports would be logical bases for any German naval or military moves in the direction of Sweden's eastern coast, or against Finland, should the Germans finally decide to assist Soviet Russia.—Editor's note.]

Minister of Propaganda Goebbels in a speech to 500 party orators tonight added his own touch with the following words on neutrality:

"It is not possible, nor in conformance with our conception of neutrality, to construct a difference between public opinion and the official attitude of the state; for instance, to assure us of neutrality on the part of a state, but at the same time to permit public opinion every journalistic excess against the German nation and its Fuehrer."

Directed at Sweden

This statement is directed largely against Sweden, which has been reprimanded severely several times by the German press for its "hateful" instigations against the Reich. It is in conformity moreover with a slowly increasing note of indignation being sounded in the German press against the "partiality" of certain neutral states.

He described Germany's war aim as "victory over the western plutocracies."

The orators who heard him talk are the men who spread Nazi propaganda throughout the nation at mass meetings and other gatherings.

Nazis Exonerate U-Boat Chief

Berlin, Feb. 13 (AP).—Authorized sources said today the commander of a German submarine was within his legal rights if he torpedoed the Netherlands steamer Burgerdijk, because the ship was en route to a British contraband control station.

(The Holland-Amerika Line reported yesterday the 6,853-ton freighter was torpedoed Saturday on a voyage from New York for Rotterdam.)

Under German prize court law any neutral vessel headed for a belligerent port, whether voluntarily or not, must be considered by German naval officers as carrying contraband.

Fraud Suspect Held in $1,400 Bail

Seven charges of false pretenses were placed against Roy P. Perry, 30, of 414 Sixth street northwest, yesterday in connection with complaints that he solicited funds for police relief associations while posing as a police lieutenant.

Detective Sergt. Richard Felber, check squad, said that more than 100 complaints have been received from citizens who gave various amounts to "Lieutenant Murphy." Perry was arraigned and pleaded not guilty before Judge Casey. He was held under $1,400 bail for a jury trial.

Kerensky Hopes Allies Win, But Warns on Dividing Russia

Declares Moscow, Under Hitler's Rule, Is Cynical Aggressor

ALEXANDER KERENSKY

Alexander Kerensky, who succeeded the Czars as ruler of all the Russias, and went down to exile after the Bolsheviks seized power, said yesterday the present conflict in Europe is a "war to the death" between a society of the free man and the society of the enslaved man.

The graying, 58-year-old exile came to Washington with his wife, formerly Lydia Allen Tritton, of Brisbane, Australia.

Kerensky explained at a press conference at the Willard he plans to visit friends here for two weeks before leaving for Europe. He will make no public appearance on this visit.

This war in Europe, he said, is not a "simple struggle between two coalitions of great powers, but is a war to the death between two irreconcilable constructions of human society—a society based on the free men against a society based on the enslaved man."

Hopes Allies Will Win

He said the war's end will be the victory of the free man in all countries, or the coming of a dark period of civil wars and anarchy.

Asked if he believed France and England will win, he said simply:

"I hope!"

Kerensky declared that the future organization of Europe is impossible without the wise settlement, not only of the German, but of the Russian problem. He said that such a settlement would mean the restoration of a "free, democratic and federated" Russia.

Says Berlin Rules Kremlin

Kerensky repeated a statement he made in a lecture here a year ago, that Stalin's government is now completely in the hands of Berlin. The reverse theory, he said, is "nonsense." The pact between Hitler and Stalin was "logical and normal," and had been prepared many, many years before it was announced last August, he said. "It is the essential psychological basis of Hitler-Stalin collaboration that both hate democracies," said Kerensky, adding that for years the democracies had been "hypnotized" by the notion that Stalin would aid them.

He said that the weakness of the Red army in Finland had aroused in some international circles not an anti-Bolshevik, but an anti-Russian feeling. He warned that partition of Russia would be the biggest error of the western powers. He said there is still time to prevent this "enormous fault," and expressed confidence that America's friendship for the Russian people would help in the prevention.

He described as a "cynical lie" Russian claims that Finland was the aggressor. "Finland is a very peaceful, very little, very weak nation, and every day has repeated offers to accept honorable peace," he said. "I am convinced rectifying Finnish-Russian frontiers could be had by peaceful understanding."

Senate Raises Finn, China Credits

Hull wrote Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that the State Department was opposed to invocation of the neutrality act in either the Russo-Finnish or Sino-Japanese conflicts.

Hull's letter concerned a resolution by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, to bring the neutrality act into operation by proclaiming a state of war exists between Japan and China and to a similar move by Senator Danaher to invoke the law against Russia and Finland.

Hull's letter was referred to a subcommittee now considering the Gillette resolution. Chairman Pittman today is expected to refer the Danaher resolution to the same subcommittee, headed by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia.

Hull contended the United States was in no danger as result of either the Russian-Finnish or the Chinese-Japanese conflicts, and consequently no need existed to invoke the neutrality act. He said his department was keeping in close touch with the Europeon situation and he believed it could be dealt with without involving the United States.

"Enactment of this law is not in accord with the State Department's program," Hull said of the Gillette resolution.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will meet today to consider all pending measures on its calendar, including Pittman's own bill to empower the President to embargo American exports to Japan. Senate leaders have adopted a "go slow" attitude toward the embargo resolution since expiration of America's commercial treaty with Japan, but Pittman will demand early action.

The Export-Import Bank bill passed yesterday by the Senate represented sharp modification of the original Brown measure to extend $80,000,000 to Finland "without strings attached." Direct loan features were removed by the Senate Banking Committee, and this action confirmed by the Foreign Relations Committee.

New Soviet Army On Way to Finland

Russian troops from the Bessarabian frontier opposite Rumania where a Red force of from 300,000 to 800,000 still camps, it was indicated.

Russian Poland Looted

The Soviet-dominated part of Poland has been drained of all available food and other supplies useful to the Red army at the front, reports said, and hardship in this territory is said to be extreme.

Information received in diplomatic quarters reflects growing Soviet anxiety over the continued massing of Anglo-French and Turkish forces in the Near East which were at first regarded in Moscow as of a defensive character.

On the basis of this information, it appears here that Josef Stalin is anxious to liquidate the Finnish war as rapidly as possible in order to arrange for effective defense of such vulnerable Russian positions as the Baku oil fields and to have his hands free for any developments that may occur.

5 More Ships Destroyed Off British Coast

10,000 Fishermen Asked to Volunteer Against Sea Raids

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 13.—Britain sent more planes to scout vulnerable spots in German territory today and called for 10,000 fishermen volunteers to combat Nazi Germany's three-dimensional sea warfare which daily claims new victims.

From French bases British scouting planes droned deep into northwest Germany despite frigid flying weather. All the British aircraft were reported to have returned safely.

U-Boat Sinks Trawler

Latest British marine casualty listed was the 290-ton British trawler Togimo, whose 11 survivors reached the Irish coast after 28 hours in an open boat and reported a German submarine sank their ship with more than a score of shells. One man was killed and three were wounded.

Another of the fishing fleet on which the British rely to supplement their imported meat supplies—the 226-ton trawler Gurth—was wrecked on the east coast. Her crew of nine was saved.

Other victims of German attempts to isolate Britain by undersea boats and mines, surface raiders and aerial bombing were:

A large, unidentified steamer which foundered off the Norfolk coast tonight. Lifeboats picked up two boat loads of her survivors.

The Norwegian freighter Nidarholm, 3,482 tons, and the Norwegian motorship Snestad, 4,144 tons, by mines or torpedoes. The Snestad was en route from Oslo to Philadelphia.

The Swedish steamer Orania, 1,854 tons, torpedoed in the North Sea Sunday. A British warship picked up ten survivors, but 14 others were missing.

The 3,927-ton Swedish freighter Dalaro, sunk by a mine or torpedo off the Irish Coast yesterday. Her crew was saved by the Belgian trawler Jean de Wanil, but the captain was reported killed.

The admiralty announced capture of eight German submarine sailors, but gave no details. This brought to 16 the number reported captured within 24 hours.

A venturesome Heinkel bomber was chased from the mouth of the Thames River by three British spitfire fighters, the air ministry reported.

Steamer Sends S O S

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The British steamer Brodwal sent out an S O S from the Mediterranean early tonight which was picked up here by Mackay Radio. She reported, without giving details, that she was in distress and required immediate assistance in the region of Sardinia.

German Freighter Sunk

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 13 (AP).—The story of the British navy's quick pounce upon the richly-laden German freighter Wakama as she tried to slip through the South Atlantic blockade yesterday was told today by Rear Admiral Sir Henry Harwood, commander of British forces in the South Atlantic.

Fighting Surpasses Verdun, Finns Say

company is sent in. And another, and another, as long as the Russians care to continue the attack.

The isthmus fighting today exceeded in intensity even the dreadful fighting on the Somme, and at Verdun in the last war, the Finnish army spokesman said tonight. In the past 24 hours 300,000 shells, a higher concentration than ever occurred at one point in the World War, was fired by the Russians in the Summa sector, he said.

The Finnish resistance at Summa, he said, has been a miracle. But how long can it last?

Soviet Dead Put at 30,000

What the Finns are up against, he made clear, is the fact that the Russians need not be deterred by casualties, since their reserves of man power are inexhaustible, while the Finns have not a man to spare.

The Russian losses in the present isthmus fighting are now between 30,000 and 40,000, said the general staff spokesman, and in the past four days, including today, 200 Soviet tanks have been destroyed.

The Russian dead lie in great heaps before the Finnish positions, but still the Russians come on, and on.

The Finns were reticent concerning their own losses.

A Finnish officer, questioned on this point, said: "We can tell you the Finnish losses are exceedingly small, and you will find it hard to believe. But our losses are small. Our men know how to conceal themselves.

Swedes Are Worried

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Feb. 13.—Reports from Finland about the military situation on the Karelian Isthmus caused deep worry in Swedish circles.

Informed Swedish observers are pessimistic about the Finns' ability to hold out much longer, particularly if it is true that the Russians have massed as much as 30 divisions in the Summa sector.

Optimists, are now in a decided minority while pessimists counsel Swedish authorities to make ready for an invasion of civilian refugees similar to the exodus of Spaniards into France when the Catalonian defense collapsed one year ago.

The Finnish soldiers will fight to the last man, it is felt, but the civilians, women and children will choose exile in Sweden rather than submission to Soviet rule, and this influx may reach a million and a half, thrice the Spanish influx into France last year.

Helsinki, Feb. 13 (AP).—Answering assault with assault, the Finns today reported advances in three of the most bloodily contested isthmus areas; the Summa sector, the shore of Lake Muola and at Taipale, on the western shore of Lake Ladoga.

A few outlying machine gun nests are the only former Finnish positions remaining in Soviet hands, the Finnish command added. "These are of no importance."

On the northeast shores of Lake Ladoga, where the Red army has been concentrating its mechanized forces in an effort to win a mainland position, additional Finnish successes were announced.

The Finns contended 23 enemy tanks were destroyed and 2 more "smashed," bringing to 767 the number captured or destroyed in the war.

Other accounts of the day's successful operations—there were no reports of losses—listed the forced retreat of a Russian detachment across the frontier near Raate, east of Suomussalmi, where the Finns cut up two enemy divisions six weeks ago.

Among the frozen Pitkaranta Islands on the northern shore of Lake Ladoga, a Russian column of 100 sledges was "smashed" as it attempted an advance. Elsewhere, Finnish fighting planes and anti-aircraft cooperated in bringing down four Soviet planes, the communique said.

Bombs Blast Cultural Center

Helsinki, Feb. 13 (AP).—Russia's air force late today resumed savage raids on Finnish cities and towns behind the lines, dropping explosive and incendiary bombs.

Picturesque Porvoo, summer resort and literary and cultural center 35 miles northeast of Helsinki, was wrecked, and Lasti, Heinola and other communities damaged. The casualty list was not known at midnight.

The center of Porvoo, a town of 7,000, was razed by flames from incendiary and explosive bombs.

Two hotels, one motion picture theater and a number of homes, including those of five doctors, were destroyed. The streets were littered with blasted pieces of furniture and other household effects. In all, 28 buildings were burning in the business districts.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Economic War Hits Balkans In Pocketbooks

Standard of Living Sinking to 1918 Level In 6 Neutral Nations

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Feb. 13.—Economic warfare sweeping through defenses of political neutrality has struck a staggering blow at the pocketbook of the average family in southeastern Europe.

Among the six small neutral nations in this backdoor of the troubled continent, the standard of living, never ample even in prosperous years, is sinking to the levels of 1918-1919.

Meatless days, gasoline rationing, coal shortages and adulterated "uniform" bread are the more obvious signs of how war is pinching these countries which are still at peace.

Although this neutral area is predominantly agricultural, food prices have gone up 10 to 400 per cent since September.

Staples Extremely High

Imported luxuries always were beyond the reach of the average person and their complete disappearance in wartime has made little difference to the masses. If one relishes occasionally a little coffee or tea, it now costs more than double last summer's price.

Staples—meat, bread and vegetables—are increasingly expensive. A laborer shoveling snow in Budapest's streets finds his day's wages of 70 cents will buy just 11 eggs; egg prices have more than trebled.

A Yugoslav snow shoveler in Zagreb gets 36 cents. The other day, 200 men staged a riot there because there were not enough jobs of this kind to go around.

Leather is scarce, and even resoling an old pair of shoes makes an appreciable dent in the family's budget. All clothing prices have soared.

Commuters never know from one day to the next whether they will have transportation because the fuel shortage causes scores of train schedules to be canceled overnight.

During the coldest weather many schools closed for weeks because of the coal shortage. To save paper, newspapers have reduced their size. Factories dependent on raw materials have either slowed production to a snail's pace or shut down.

The textile industry is one of the hardest hit because it is impossible to obtain steady supplies of American cotton through the Allied blockade.

The keynote of official opinion in southeastern Europe was sounded recently by Premier Count Paul Teleki, of Hungary, when he said that the neutrals would have to carry still more of the brunt of the war and that "real privations have yet to come."

The average family is afraid that the premier is right.

All but $5,522,521 of the $28,628,021 eliminated from shipbuilding funds was based on the committee's belief the United States should construct "superdreadnaughts" and "supercruisers." They cut in half money alloted for two 45,000-ton battleships and two 10,000-ton cruisers started last year, on the theory they might be converted to larger craft before work had proceeded too far.

The House Naval Affairs Committee prepared to meet this morning to determine whether to fight the cuts made by the Appropriations Committee, and also to vote on a $655,000,000 authorization bill to further expand the fleet. It appeared doubtful any strong opposition would develop against the reductions, as members believed they would have to be voted later in a deficiency bill, probably early next year after the elections.

Mr. Roosevelt also announced he had signed two deficiency bills to provide additional Army and Navy funds for the current fiscal year. One provides $28,000,000 for shipbuilding and the other $252,340,776 for expansion of the armed forces ordered because of the European War.

The naval supply bill, which even with the cuts, was $51,412,629 above appropriations for the current year, contains $1,000,000 for starting a $3,000,000 harbor improvement project at Guam. Proposed development of the western Pacific Island stirred up anew the controversy which raged last year.

Funds for naval aviation were cut to $99,563,300, $21,714,000 below budget estimates, and a proposed $20,000,000 contract authorization for new planes was halved. The money allowed will provide 305 replacement planes, plus 47 for Reserve training, while 224 asked as an increase were denied. The committee reported that 2,863 naval planes would be on hand or order this June.

Besides the two battleships and two cruisers, the bill provides for starting next year, one aircraft carrier, eight destroyers, six submarines and four auxiliaries and for carrying on construction of eight battleships and 89 other warcraft. One nonrigid airship was allowed by the committee, two being asked by the Navy.

A cut of $2,000,000 was made in proposed funds for modernizing the aircraft carriers Saratoga and Lexington, under which one will be deferred. Savings of $25,871,140 resulted from the elimination of two net-laying vessels and a number of submarine nets to protect harbors and ships from torpedo attack in time of war.

Personnel funds were reduced $9,467,722 by allowing the Navy 150,000 enlisted men next year, an increase of 5,000 instead of 7,000, by cutting in half a scheduled 1,000 retired officers to be called to active duty, restricting promotions in enlisted grades and withholding ration funds.

Several increases over the budget estimates were made, among them $200,000 for training volunteer naval reserves, $250,000 for increasing experimental work at the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., and $50,000 for purchase of autogiros and helicopters. The committee declared the Navy had neglected work in these fields.

Allies Check Nazi Neighbors' Trade With U.S.

This Country's Exports To Neutrals Near Reich Have Doubled, Trebled

By the Associated Press

Paris, Feb. 13.—French military sources say Allied blockade officials will concentrate their investigations on American exports to neutral states bordering Germany on the grounds that much of these exports may be destined for Germany.

These sources cite figures indicating exports to neutrals around Germany have doubled and trebled pre-war figures.

Norway is held to have received $15,000,000 worth of American goods in September, October and November of 1939, compared with $5,500,000 worth in the same period of 1938.

Other neutrals' figures cited for the same comparative periods include, Switzerland, $7,000,000 and $300,000; Sweden, $35,000,000 and $18,000,000; Baltic States, $31,000,000 and $21,000,000, and Italy, $17,000,000 and $14,000,000.

Nazis Boost Exports

Belgrade, Feb. 13.—Germany is increasing her exports to Yugoslavia in spite of the war, official figures reveal tonight. In the first four months of the war, Yugoslavia purchased goods from Germany worth 25 per cent more than in the same period of 1938, although there was a slight fall in quantity. In these same months, Germany bought just over 50 per cent of Yugoslavia's exports.

Germany, strangely enough, is selling her merchandise of which she is short at home, such as textile tissues, raw cotton and colonial products, including coffee.

Bulgar Trade Rising

Sofia, Feb. 13.—German-Bulgarian trade in 1939 increased in volume by 25 per cent, according to official statistics published tonight. In the first four months of the war, Germany increased purchases from Bulgaria by 61 per cent over the previous year's figures, but sales dropped 41 per cent.

Since the war, Germany has sold gasoline, raw cotton, chemicals, coffee, tea and other colonial products in larger quantities.

Vatican Gives Taylor Regular Envoy Ranking

Holy See Rules On Protocol; Welles To Visit Il Duce

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Vatican City, Feb. 13.—Myron C. Taylor, whatever his official title may be, will be just as much an Ambassador to the Holy See as the representatives of the other nations, according to a statement today by a Vatican jurist, who has just completed a study of the diplomatic precedence and procedure involved.

This is how the argument goes. Taylor will have to present credentials without which it is not possible to accredit any kind of diplomatic agent, even an extraordinary and personal one.

According to international law, all diplomatic agents are named by the sovereign (in this case the head of the state, President Roosevelt) and therefore they have a public character. Hence, the fact that Taylor has been named personally by Mr. Roosevelt does not distinguish him from other diplomatic agents who, in representing their states, also represent their sovereigns personally.

Since Mr. Roosevelt cannot as a simple American citizen send a representative to a foreign sovereign, he can only send Taylor here through his position as President of the United States.

U. S. Seal May Be Omitted

Diplomatic agents are sent not by governments but by sovereigns or heads of state, and the change of government does not necessitate a renewal of the credentials. Only a radical change of regime can bring that about, which means that from the legal viewpoint Taylor could remain accredited to the Holy See even after Mr. Roosevelt ceased to be President.

Balkans Secure for a Time, Says Saracoglu

By Anne O'Hare McCormick.

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Feb. 13.—His journey to Belgrade and Sofia has greatly increased the confidence of Foreign Minister Saracoglu that the war will not shift to the Balkans. This assurance, he explained in an interview today, is based on a new premise.

"The Balkan powers are stronger than when the war started," he said, "stronger in a military sense and more united. We now feel that an attack on one is an attack on all and I am certain we will act accordingly . . .

"The Bulgarian government now fully shares the Entente view, that at this moment the general interests transcend any particular interests. This is a new factor which cannot be overlooked in the European situation."

If the conflict should spread to this region, the Turkish attitude is clear. "If we are not at war and an aggressive move obliges other powers to aid the victim under the pact registered at Geneva to which we are a party, the Montreux Convention immediately goes into effect," declared Saracoglu.

This requires opening the straits to belligerent warships coming to the assistance of the invaded state. It is the point on which negotiations with Moscow broke down last September.

There is very little likelihood that Turkey would not be at war under the above circumstances, however. While "the escape clause" in the agreement with Great Britain and France exempts the Turks from fighting Russia, Saracoglu pointed out it does not oblige them not to fight.

"The clause simply leaves the decision in our hands," he said. "Turkey is free to act as she sees fit."

They have little doubt here what form the decision would take. Turkey has charted a course to be followed in any eventuality. Much work has been done in recent months on a strong refortification of the Dardanelles.

Saracoglu scouts the idea that the Caucasus is a danger point. Quite aside from the difficulties of conflict, he says, the mountains are impassable on both sides except for infinitesimal forces. He has no doubt the Turkish armies can defend the Turkish borders.

"I realy do not foresee that we will be called on to defend them," he said, "the balance has changed for one thing, and it is in the interests of the Allies as well as Germany, to limit the war area. I cannot believe either side wants to take on another adversary. For this reason and because of greater Balkan strength and unity, I think we are reasonably sure of peace for this year at least.

What Are They Doing With Your Child?

Every parent will be interested in the Picture Story of the Washington Schools . . . to appear in a series of 8-page sections in The Sunday Post, starting Sunday, February, 18th

The first of a series of 8-page sections, to be called "Our Town In Pictures," will appear in The Washington Post Sunday. As indicated by the title, approximately 75% of the material in these sections will be pictures.

The first five of this series of Sunday Post sections will be on Washington's schools, and the first four on the public schools, as follows:

Part I. Feb. 18. The Elementary Grades. The School System and Plant.

Part II. Feb. 25. The Junior Highs. The Story of Washington's Teachers.

Part III. March 3. The High Schools.

Part IV. March 10. Special Schools. Special Problems. Adult Schools.

Part V. March 17. Private and Parochial Schools.

These will NOT be dry-as-dust, wordy treatises. They will be lively, human, absorbing picture stories of the child's adventure in school. For example, there will be a picture series showing a child's steps in learning to read, another on wrestling with home work, and so on. Each of these picture series will carry explanatory text so you can get the story of the child's activities in both words and pictures.

The Board of Education and the Washington Public School System are co-operating with The Post by furnishing material and arranging for the taking of pictures in the classrooms.

Every parent will be interested in this picture story of what Washington children do and learn in school. Be sure to arrange for your copies of The Post in advance. Don't depend on buying back copies; because of lack of storage facilities The Post will not be able to keep a supply of back copies on hand. You will want this complete series. Phone now, and be sure not to miss a single issue of Sunday's Post. NAtional 4200.

Elementary Grade Children Shown In First Section of This Post Series

The first section in this series will contain these picture stories:

The kindergartner starts to school.

The 1st grader learns to read.

The 2nd grader learns to write.

The 3rd grader discovers his community.

The 4th grader learns geography and becomes serious about arithmetic.

The 5th grader gets to history and social problems.

What does the 6th grader know?

All done in pictures and text that practicaly take you into the classroom to see for yourself how the child learns! Then there will be other picture stories, tracing progress through the elementary grades: The development of independence, of social consciousness. Home work. Discipline. The workings of Washington's dual system, with white and colored schools. The school system as an industry, including equipment, buildings, tax problems, personnel. And the sections on succeeding Sundays will be equally interesting!

President Gets Plan to Employ Idle U. S. Ships

Kennedy Proposes Americans Trade Routes With British

Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to London, said yesterday that he had presented to President Roosevelt a proposal for putting idle American ships and seamen to work by exchanging certain American shipping routes for British routes.

Kennedy conferred with the President for 1½ hours, and earlier in the day he talked with Secretary of State Hull for 40 minutes.

Though Kenendy would not give any details, he indicated that his plan would be undertaken in cooperation with the British government, with whom he would consult on his return to London.

The British need additional tonnage on runs from American to British ports which are in the combat areas forbidden to American ships, he said. He thought a plan could be worked out that would allow American ships to operate on runs to the British possessions outside of the combat areas, and that tonnage released in this manner could be used by the British on runs which American ships can no longer travel.

The use of American ships on these routes would give employment to many American officers and seamen, Kennedy added.

Before leaving Washington on Thursday, Kennedy said, he will talk with Jerome Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, on the liquidation of foreign holdings of American securities. He will also see Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan administrator, and Daniel W. Bell, undresecretary of the Treasury.

Canada Is Second

Secretary Hull said the Ambassador would be prepared to take up with the British again such questions as stoppage of British purchases of tobacco and fruits in an effort to conserve British resources in dollar exchange.

Of interest in this connection was a report by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins yesterday, showing that the United Kingdom again was the best customer of the United States in 1939.

In a geographical analysis of last year's foreign trade, the department said that the United Kingdom's $505,227,000 purchases from the United States, although slightly smaller than in 1938, led all other countries. Canada, as usual, was second with $493,450,000, Japan third with $231,405,000, France fourth with $181,825,000 and the Philippine Islands fifth with $100,018,000.

Canada again was the leading importer to the United States, shipping in products totaling $340,066,000. The next four sources of imports were: Japan, $161,196,000; United Kingdom, $149,669,000; British Malaya, $148,965,000; and the Philippine Islands, $91,927,000.

Toward the end of the year, foreign trade was affected by the war, cutting off exports to Germany, increasing airplane shipments to France, and generally boosting sales to Canada, Latin America and Asia.

Bill Is Passed Split Income Tax

2 per cent and a personal income tax on salaries in excess of $14,000.

"A practical objection" to an income tax with the Federal bases of $2,500 and $1,000 (as adopted), the report stated, "arises over the possibility of Congress passing legislation permitting the States to tax the salaries of all Federal employes," adding:

"Many of the States will require the Federal employes to pay an income tax on their salaries in order to maintain a voting residence. Thus, Federal employes who desire to vote in their home States will be subject to triple taxation, that is, a Federal tax, a State tax, and a District tax, unless permitted to credit State income taxes paid against the District tax."

"If such a situation should arise, it is probable that Congress would not require Federal employes to pay a District income tax, and the District would derive materially less revenue as a result."

Exemption of Federal employes who pay State income taxes while living in the Capital, District officials said, will bring about a deficit in current revenues that can be met only by raising other taxes or increasing the Federal lump sum payment.

Aged Home Called Second-Hand

Blue Plains should be sent to hospitals.

The welfare director had recommended that persons chronically ill who required personal care rather than medical treatment should be retained at the home. He indorsed a proposal of Dr. Lynne A. Fullerton, of the U. S. Public Health Service, that the staff of nurses in the infirmary be enlarged.

Bondy suggested inmates be relieved of personnel duties unless they volunteered and then they should be allowed to work only under supervision of the paid management.

More adequate facilities, added personnel and larger appropriations for food and clothing are needed, he said. The home is being operated, he added, as efficiently as possible with present funds.

Almost all equipment at Blue Plains is second-hand, Bondy said. Boilers discarded by the Capitol are in use, he explained along with beds cast aside by the Fire Department. Furniture was taken from hotels razed when the Union Station Plaza was built.

Bondy said that "ultimately" present buildings at Blue Plains should be replaced by a "cottage city" in which inmates could be segregated according to race, sex and physical fitness.

Bondy told the sub-committee he had caused improvement in the quality of food served at Blue Plains last December when he took a nutritionist from the Health Department with him to inspect the place.

He added he had intended to make similar checks on medical facilities and the physical plant at the home, with the aid of experts, when the House investigation was ordered.

Pensions Change Picture

The type of persons who go to indigent homes for the aged, Bondy said, is different from what it was a few years ago when pensions were rare or nonexistent. Many old persons prefer to live with relatives or alone rather than enter what used to be called "the poor house."

As a consequence of this change, he explained, the House for the Aged and Infirm receives more chronically ill old persons than it formerly did.

The welfare director also discussed needs of other institutions and made recommendations for improvements.

McReynolds, while pointing out that "the basic fault is in the lack of money," said local taxpayers "are paying as much as they can" and that the only means he saw of obtaining additional revenue is to increase the Federal payment to the District.

He told the subcommittee the Commissioners are subject "to pressure groups" in the allocation of funds every year when the District budget is prepared.

Consequently, schools and Health Department facilities, often are treated more generously than welfare institutions which have little or no civic backing, he said.

Senate Unit Delays Action On Silver Bill

Committee to Consult Departments Before Reaching Decision

By the Associated Press

The Senate Banking Committee delayed action yesterday on a proposal recommended by a subcommittee to discontinue Treasury purchases of foreign silver.

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, said "this matter involves our foreign policy as well as purchases here by nations who have been sending us silver."

"Most committee members," he added, "thought it best for us to consult the State and Treasury departments before acting."

Mexico, Canada, China and some South American countries have been the chief beneficiaries of foreign silver purchases, some Senators said.

Trade Repercussion Feared

Barkley recalled that the State Department had opposed curtailment of foreign silver purchases during the last session of Congress and that the Treasury said a prohibition against silver buying might reduce sales of American products.

Mexico and China, Barkley said, might be seriously affected.

"We have been increasing our trade with Mexico and South and Central America as a result of wars elsewhere," Barkley said. These nations are buying things from us they formerly purchased from Europe.

"There is a question of keeping that trade permanently. If we cease buying their silver, the results might be serious."

Loans to China Cited

The majority leader said also that China, where silver is highly important, had been extended a loan by the Export-Import Bank.

"It would be perfectly ridiculous to say we will loan you money but won't take your silver in repayment," he said.

Barkley, a member of a sub-committee which previously approved the silver bill, said the vote was 5 to 3.

The resolution, by Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, would have terminated the authority granted under the 1934 silver purchase act.

China Regains Suiyan Areas, Claims Victory

Japanese Withdraw Toward Paotow; Air Raid Attempted

Shanghai (Wednesday), Feb. 14 (AP).—The Japanese army on the northern front began withdrawing toward Paotow today, and Chinese troops poured into the Suiyan Province regions they had given up in the face of a Japanese attack.

The Chinese termed the withdrawal a sweeping Chinese victory similar to that claimed early this week in the reoccupation of Pinyang, 50 miles northeast of Nanning, capital of Kwangsi Province, in south China.

Neutral military observers, however, placed credence in the Japanese reports that both the Northern and Southern operations were directed at dispersing threatening Chinese forces rather than occupying new territory permanently.

However, both operations were regarded as additional evidence of the Japanese lack of men and materials for further extension of lines into the interior.

Attack on Railway Attempted

Hongkong (Wednesday), Feb. 14 (AP).—Twenty-seven Japanese warplanes attempted another attack on the Hanoi-Kunming railway yesterday, according to Chinese advices reaching here today, but the assault was broken up by Chinese airmen.

The United States and France recently made representations to Japan against repeated raids on the French-operated railway.

The railway, from French Indo-China into the Chinese southwest, is one of the lifelines of the Chungking government.

A Japanese bomber was reported shot down and other Japanese planes damaged. No further details were given.

Business Men Indorse Fair Trades Bill

The Columbia Heights Businessmen's Association at its luncheon yesterday indorsed the proposed fair trades practice bill introduced by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland. The measure is now before the Senate District Committee.

Toll Mounts as Blizzards Rage Across Europe

By the Associated Press

Europe's unprecedented cold spread across the southeast yesterday, taking a mounting toll of lives, harassing communications and aiding the British-French blockade of Nazi Germany.

Fifty died in Hungary alone, trans-European trains were halted in the Balkans by raging blizzards and distress calls poured in from Aegean and Mediterranean shipping.

Oil and food trains bound for Germany were stalled along with passenger trains in gale-driven snowdrifts. Telephone and telegraph lines were snapped by ice from rain which froze as it fell.

Isolated on Danube River boats were more than 2,500 central European Jewish refugees. One group, frozen in since January 1, near Cladova, Rumania, was reported without food and heat.

Balkan residents slept in their overcoats, their coal bins empty.

At Amsterdam 11.2 below was the coldest ever recorded.

Scandinavian countries got a slight relief, but ice-locked seas continued to prevent arrival of needed fuel.

Denmark's temperature dropped to 13 below zero last night, coldest since 1893.

On the Norwegian coast at least 50 vessels were locked in the ice.

Norway's schools were closed, heat in buildings was rigidly restricted, and hot running water was banned altogether.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

When It's Hedy Lamarr, 'I Take This Woman!'

And Wouldn't Tracy Be Crazy Not To?
Katharine Cornell to Offer Extra Matinee;
News, Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THERE IS A LITTLE BIT of the flavor of "The Citadel" about it—but not much. There is an oversized eyeful of Hedy Lamarr's cameo beauty and a prolonged study of Spencer Tracy in a role that one somehow suspects he didn't fancy too much.

BELL

This, of course, would be about the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "I Take This Woman," previewed for the drama desks yesterday afternoon. Mr. Tracy is the young doctor, whose place is among the lowlier of the invalids, Miss Lamarr is his impetuously acquired wife, whose roots are imbedded in the upper crust and the whole thing has the savor of an ambitious undertaking that did not quite jell.

That is to say, it did not quite jell from the standpoint of the strict appraiser of dramatic values. From the viewpoint of the casual spectator, with a high penchant for succumbing to the more superficial of the cinema's emotional paroxysms, the piece will go down as a star-spangled hit. Long lines of ladies will surrender to Mr. Tracy's plaintive case and long lines of men will wonder why they can't sometime meet somebody that looks like Hedy Lamarr. It would be nice, at that.

After a long somnolence—on the basis of Washington's first-run releases—Veree Teasdale, who is by way of being Mrs. Adolphe Menjou in private life, comes back to the races in this one and does a scintillantly fine job of it. If her opportunities were a little more ample, she would run away with the show.

There are some others in the cast who come back from obscurity, too. Notable among them are Paul Cavanagh and Louis Calhern, who turn in nice performances in parts that have been chiseled out of nothing much by Charlie MacArthur, credited with the not-so-original story on which "I Take This Woman" is based.

By the way, has anyone ever referred to her as Heyday Lamarr? Well, somebody will, sooner or later, because that is what she seems to be enjoying at the moment.

Coming events cast their shadows and all that sort of thing. Because of the great advance demand for seats, Katharine Cornell will play an extra matinee of S. N. Behrman's "No Time For Comedy," at the National Theater next week. This will be a holiday performance on Thursday, February 22, Washington's Birthday, and will be over and above the regularly scheduled Wednesdy and Saturday matinees. The adroit deception of the title should not be permitted to fool anyone. "No Time For Comedy" is a comedy—a very bright, breezy and buoyant one, from the reading of it.

Not from the heart of the Gobi Desert, not from Tangiers, which is in Morocco, nor yet from the Malay Peninsula, there still comes a letter from Maynard Owen Williams, foreign editor of the National Geographic Magazine, date-lined, prosaically enough, Chevy Chase, Md. "Dear Nelson: At Bethesda's Hiser Theater, La Dietrich (in a double bill of 'Destry' and the Louis-Godoy fight films) out-fights Godoy, while Godoy out-hugs and out-kisses La Dietrich. Jimmy Stewart out-referees Arthur Donovan by out-waiting him. After this fight, Donovan ought to make a good park policeman, breaking up petting parties. Glad to see you're back in print. Cheerio. (Signed) WILLIAMS."

That's more or less how it sounded over the air, but Dietrich somehow didn't enter into the thing, as I heard it. The fight films, incidentally, are packing 'em in at both the Hiser, in Bethesda, and Sid Lust's Arcade, in Hyattsville.

Even if Ed Arnold did present Dashiell Hammett's "Thin Man" to S. S. Van Dine, in his glib autobiography of "Lorenzo Goes to Hollywood," the S. S. Van Dine fans will have their innings, come Washington's Birthday at the Metropolitan. The attraction then will be "Calling Philo Vance." James Stephenson, well-known British actor, will have the title role, with the Warners' new importation from Broadway, Margot Stevenson, supplying the romantic interest. Henry O'Neill, Ed Brophy, Sheila Bromley and Ralph Forbes are other members of the cast. So now you know.

When "Dr. Faustus" is presented at Catholic University on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights, in the University Theater on the campus, lighting effects new to Washington will be introduced. The key-word in Father Harike's description of the innovation seems to be "simultaneously." Just what that means remains to be seen. It probably will be worth watching.

To-Whom-It-May-Concern Note

Thanks for all the kindly letters and phone calls. We'll lick those bugs yet—I hope.

Actress Learning 'Musical Saw'

Ann Sothern is learning to play the musical saw in self-defense.

The actress, who once again brings Maisie back to the screen in the forthcoming "Congo Maisie," has been among musicians since a child. Her mother, Annette Yde, is a noted singer, Ann herself is a concert pianist, and Ann's husband, Roger Pryor, a famed band leader in musicals on the screen.

"And now to end all doubt as to my abilities, I've taken up the musical saw," she laughs. "That should really disqualify me as a musician and decide my career once and for all."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 13 (INS).—For the very first time in his career, Ronald Colman is being costarred with another player. But when I tell you it is Ginger Rogers, you will understand why he consented to give up his solo honors. I must say George J. Schaefer, RKO's chief, went about signing Colman quietly enough. Not a word leaked out that these two players would costar in "Good Luck," an original story by Sascha Guitry which will be produced by Harry Edington.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Production starts March 1, so that if Ronnie wants to do "The Life and Death of John Doe" he will have plenty of time. Frank Capra takes months to get his pictures in production. The RKO movie is a comedy-drama love story, with Colman playing light comedy in a typical Ginger Rogers bit of nonsense.

Olivia de Havilland, who has been pouting at Warners for two months, yesterday walked on the lot to discuss "Flight Eight." She has been suspended ever since she refused to play in "Saturday's Children," because she said she wanted something especially good after "Gone With the Wind." Warners' grievance at her was caused, not so much because she refused the picture, but because she wouldn't answer their telephone calls. Her contract with Warners forbids her doing anything outside, so unless she does accept "Flight Eight," a Bryan Foy production, she won't be put on salary. After Olivia's disciplining is ended, the hatchet should be buried once and for all.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Lili Damita and Errol Flynn still are living apart, although they have conversed over the telephone; don't be surprised if Eddie Hillman and his divorced wife, the former Lady June Inverclyde, remarry; Gloria Blondell and Cubby Broccoli, nightly diners at the House of Murphy, are looking altarward; Grace Hayes is sicker than her friends know at a Santa Barbara hospital; the best Mexican food I ever tasted was served at the Jack Warners, Sunday night. Ann and Jack entertained about twelve guests in honor of the Ed Laskers and Jack Krindler of "21" fame; the Milton Brens also hosted a small dinner for the Laskers, who are being much entertained. Adam Gimbel hobbled in on a crutch. He broke his leg at Sun Valley. His wife, one of New York's smartest dressed women, discussed styles with Kay Francis. She is a style adviser for Sak's Fifth Avenue.

Sally Eilers, Harry Joe Brown, Andy Lawler and the Charles Feldmans were the other guests; Joan Crawford caught the bride's bouquet at Hymie Fink's wedding; Sabu,

In Hollywood

It's a little surprising to see a picture like "My Little Chicadee," starring Mae West and Bill Fields on the heels of some of the finest pictures ever made anywhere. Not only is it not up to our present standard, but may do the industry, at this particular time, a great deal of harm. Understand the studio will make no effort to over-publicize it, because the new Universal has really done some fine things. Can it be that millions of radio listeners who gave both the network and the sponsors a year's headache over a Mae West episode over the airways are not the same millions that attend motion pictures? Or do they expect less of pictures than they do of radio? Well, I can tell you that in the last six months Hollywood has turned out the finest entertainment ever known.

The morning after my story on the Hollywood extra situation I had a phone call from Paul Schofield who said: "Isn't that funny, Hedda. Dudley Murphy, Dudley Nichols and I have just finished a screenplay on that situation which we named Hollywoodland." He sent me a copy. It's a swell story. Now two studios are bidding for it.

Elsa Maxwell is having herself a romp. On the heels of her prediction as to when the European war would end, she goes right back to her star-gazing—and tells a reporter that she knows who will be our next President. It won't be Roosevelt or Dewey. I think somebody should trip her up and pin her down. Make her come clean and give a name even if she has to invent one.

Liz Whitney's horses have already arrived on the coast and are bedded down awaiting the arrival of their mistress. It would be fun if she will turn the tables on Hollywood and cracks out with a success. And don't think she hasn't worked hard to prepare herself. She has. Everyone knows she's a magnificent horsewoman. Well, well! Frances Farmer's back in town, angling for a picture. Understand she's been suspended from Equity in New York so can't appear on the stage. Which doesn't make Hollywood actors too anxious to cooperate. Frances is a swell actress, had more help than almost any other girl here. And has shown less gratitude.

Ramspeck Tells WPA Workers Not to Worry

Those With Salaries From Relief Funds Will Not Be Excluded

By Alfred Friendly.

Noncivil service employes in various Federal agencies paid from funds stemming from WPA appropriations need not worry about exclusion from benefits of the Ramspeck, bill, the author, Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, said yesterday.

Despite contrary reports, the committee-approved amendment to the bill which excludes from its operation "positions in or connected with the Works Project Administration" will affect only administrative employes of the WPA itself and project workers, Ramspeck said.

That several thousand other employes, scattered throughout the Government, whose salaries come from relief bills, would be excluded from the benefits of the bill is an "illogical" assumption, he added.

Explains His Position

Ramspeck said he "certainly did not" agree with the construction placed on the amendment in certain quarters that employes not in WPA but paid by its funds could not be covered into civil service.

"It is as illogical to say that they will be excluded as to say that PWA or FSA employes will be left out because the money to pay them comes out of the same (relief) bill," the House Civil Service Committee chairman said.

He added that he would take no action to change the wording of the amendment, since he believed none was necessary. If doubts continue, however, it was implied the Senate can remedy the clause.

Union news of the day is that John Arthur Shaw, onetime president of the American Federation of Government Employes, has joined the organization staff of the United Federal Workers.

Shaw, who was originally an active member of the National Federation of Federal Employes, was the chairman of the organizing committee which sought re-affiliation with the A. F. L. when the N. F. F. E. withdrew. Suspended from the organization, he was active in the founding of the A. F. G. E. and became its first elected president, serving in 1932-33.

He has been national director of the Labor Department Veterans Employment Service, a national officer of the Disabled American Veterans and was prominent in the anteeconomy fight for Federal employes when salaries were cut in 1932 and 1933. He also campaigned against the late unlamented Section 213, the "marriage clause."

With the organizations: Labor Department Lodge, A. F. G. E., will answer your questions on retirement legislation at a special meeting at 4:45 p. m. today in room 4217 Labor Department . . . The National Association of Regulars has asked the Senate Civil Service Committee to make sure that nothing in the apportionment rider to the Ramspeck bill shall deprive former service men of the usual freedom from apportionment which persons with veterans preference now enjoy . . . The U. F. W. A.'s national "Campaign Against Ruinous Economy" gets underway at 8 p. m. tomorrow at a mass meeting in the Labor Department Auditorium.

Norfolk Children Find Hospitality at Police Station

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

The Hubbard children, Lonnie, 4; Gwendolyn, 2, and Novella, 3, were given milk and sandwiches at a police station when they arrived without funds in Philadelphia from Norfolk, Va., with their 23-year-old mother, Mrs. Mary Hubbard. A welfare shelter later took them in

Farley who, with Farley's consent, on Saturday had filed a slate of Farley-pledged delegates. The Farley filing, however, was predicated on President Roosevelt not running for a third term.

Ony a short time before Kennedy acted, President Roosevelt apparently eliminated any possibility of his withdrawing his name from the Wisconsin and Illinois Presidential preference primaries, where it has been filed by other Democratic leaders.

Asked directly at his press conference whether he was going to do anything about the filing of his name in those States, Mr. Roosevelt replied that he did not know a thing about it.

While no acceptance statement on a candidate's part is required in Wisconsin, a signed declaration of candidacy has customarily been filed with all petitions for a place on the Illinois primary ballot. The President has until February 24 to withdraw his name if he does not want it on the Illinois ballot, but it was considered unlikely last night that he would be back in the Capital by that date following the fishing trip on which he departs today.

Kennedy Issues Statement

Kennedy, preparing to return to his ambassadorial post in London on February 24, declined immediate comment on the reports from Boston, but in the evening issued a statement from his hotel here saying:

My attention has been called to newspaper reports that my name may be submitted in Massachusetts and other States for the election of delegates pledged to me for President in the forthcoming Democratic National Convention.

Appreciating as I must the great honor implied in this step, nevertheless I must with positiveness state that I am not a candidate. Even though consideration for such an honor is most flattering, I cannot forget that I now occupy a most important Government post which at this particular time involves matters so precious to the American people that no private consideration should permit my energies or interests to be diverted.

For my numerous friends who have been anxious for me to submit my name for the consideration of the American electorate I am deeply grateful. However, the paramount consideration of public duty compels me to decline to permit my name to be presented.

Wheeler Supported

Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference, when questioned, that he had not heard of the expected Kennedy statement. He said also he had not discussed with Farley the latter's authorization for his filing in Massachusetts.

Vice President Garner already has filed in the Wisconsin and Illinois Presidential primaries, on April 2 and April 8, respectively, and it appeared certain that his and the President's names would be in competition on the ballots in both States.

While the President's failure to declare himself out of the race for the nomination has curtailed open campaigning of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, there was some talk last night that McNutt's name might be filed in Wisconsin. Should there be such a development, it was pointed out, it apparently would conflict with the McNutt asurances a third-term campaign by Mr. Roosevelt would be supported by him.

Wheeler was supported for the nomination in a statement last night by former Senator Clarence C. Dill (Democrat), of Washington.

British Release Supplies for Poles

Eight shipments of American Red Cross supplies for Polish relief have been released by British blockade authorities and are en route from Genoa, Italy, to Cracow, Poland, the Red Cross announced here yesterday.

One consignment of medical supplies and warm clothing already has reached Cracow and has been distributed by James T. Nicholson, Red Cross agent, to Polish, Jewish and other relief agencies, according to E. J. Swift, vice chairman in charge of foreign operations.

Blood Bank Drive Passes $1,000 Mark

tributed to The Post-Children's Hospital Fund amounted to nearly $50.

The James Reese Europe Auxiliary Unit, No. 5, American Legion, after its benefit party at Garnett-Patterson School, reported $82.25, and some returns are still to come in, Mrs. Marie Gardiner, child welfare chairman, said.

The residence of Miss Joan McKenna at 62 Kalorama Circle was the scene of a dance given by the Thursday Evening Club, all proceeds to go to the blood bank. Miss McKenna is president of the club.

The Post received the following letter yesterday from Gloria Jean, 11-year-old movie starlet in Hollywood:

"I want to thank you and everyone in Washington for the chance to help The Post blood bank fund. You know that it means a lot to me because blood transfusions saved my own life.

"I think the blood bank should be important to others, too, because it is an easy and wonderful way to help others. I hope that your Valentine parties are a huge success. And I'm really sorry that I can't be there with you."

Gloria Jean bought her blood bank party ticket when she was in Washington to participate with a galaxy of film stars in the President's birthday ball celebration.

Swelling the coffer yesterday was a $153 check representing the proceeds of the bridge given by the University Club Sunday night.

So great has been the demand for the heart-shaped party tickets supplied by The Post the stock ran out for the third time yesterday. There will be more, however, and it is not yet too late to organize games and bridges for the blood bank fund. Simply call at The Post, or write, and give the name of the sponsoring organization or individual and state the number of tickets you'll need.

"I am too little to play bridge," said a note which was received yesterday, "but I like to help my little sisters and brothers. So I am sending $1 for the Post Blood Bank."

The letter, in a child's handwriting, was signed, "Jean Ratner, 3 years old, 530 Third street southwest."

Among private parties held yesterday was a luncheon bridge given by Mrs. A. E. Giegengack, wife of the Public Printer, who entertained in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. The following were present:

Mrs. James G. Haskell, Mrs. James E. Duke, Mrs. Eugene J. Tighe, Mrs. Ellis Searles, Mrs. Martin E. Joynt, Mrs. Joseph B. Stanley, Mrs. Garth Healy, Mrs. Vincent Burke, Mrs. Gerald A. Walsh, Mrs. Frank Hegarty, Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, Mrs. Charles P. Neill, Mrs. Benjamin B. Cain, Mrs. Henry Hockwald, Mrs. Marion Strickling, Mrs. James J. Murnane, Mrs. Charles H. Curl, Mrs. Frank A. Ellithorp, Mrs. Justin V. O'Conor, Mrs. John I. Haas and Mrs. Thomas Woods.

Mrs. George Jelinek, ways and means chairman of the George Truesdell School P.-T. A., yesterday ordered 100 tickets for a benefit card party to be held in the school auditorium the afternoon of March 5. Mrs. Joseph V. Reed is co-chairman on arrangements. Miss Nell Hiscox is school principal and Mrs. Arthur Shapiro president of the P.-T. A. unit.

Although 25 and 50-table parties are numerous, the backbone of the blood bank campaign is the private home three-and-four-table entertainment. The Post has been all but swamped with announcements of these small gatherings.

Hardly typical, but illustrative of the universal desire to help the drive along is the case of a delegation of youngsters who walked into Children's Hospital yesterday and planked down $11.30.

"We gave a party for the blood bank, at a quarter a head," the leader explained.

Following are some of the larger Valentine parties scheduled for today:

National Cathedral Post No. 10, American Legion, at the New Colonial Hotel. This party, featuring dancing as well as cards, is open to the public. Tickets are 75 cents each. The program will begin at 8 o'clock.

Combined party of the ten parish groups of the Ladies of Charity, also open to the public, at 1:30 p. m., in St. Paul's Parish Hall, Fifteenth and V streets northwest.

Bridge party at the Chevy Chase Club, sponsored by Mrs. Winslow B. Van Devanter and Mrs. William J. Flather, jr.

George Washington Post No. 1, American Legion, at 2108 Sixteenth street northwest. This is the pioneer post of the American Legion and initiated the idea of Legion participation in the project. The public is invited to this card party, which will begin at 8 p. m.

Employes of The Post also will "play for blood" tonight at 2407 Connecticut avenue.

A Commanding Position

The arrival of some 30,000 Australian and New Zealand troops in Egypt calls attention to the impressive military concentrations which the Allied High Command is assembling in the Near East. The forces gathered around the eastern rim of the Mediterranean, in Syria, Palestine and Egypt, are already estimated at close to 600,000. If one includes the army of Turkey, a country closely bound to Great Britain and France by political and economic ties, the total swells to a force of a million men.

This concentration obviously serves a number of purposes. For Mussolini it is a useful reminder of the isolation of Ethiopia and the vulnerability of the Italian province of Libya, hemmed in by French Tunisia on the west and Egypt to the east. For Turkey it is a living pledge of prompt and effective assistance, if for any reason that country should become involved with either Germany or Russia. For all the Balkan nations it is an intimation that Great Britain and France are now in a position to extend a powerful leverage in their affairs, if the present balance there should be disturbed.

The Allied legions which Gen. Weygand supervises from Beirut can, therefore, properly be regarded as a stabilizing force. There is as yet no reason to anticipate that they are gathered for a drive against Germany from the southeast. Such an eventuality is not impossible, of course, but the primary objective is obviously to increase Allied influence in a part of Europe where Germany has, heretofore, had the inner track. The presence of these Anglo-French armies is a counterthreat to Russia's Baltic ambitions and a constant suggestion to Germany that the West Wall is not the complete safeguard which Hitler has so frequently proclaimed it.

In the maneuvering for position and strategic advantage which is in progress the Allied concentrations in the Near East are a factor of great importance. To place a piece where it commands a portion of the board without jeopardy to itself is an essential part of the technique of victory in chess. It is no less so in the gigantic play for position now so apparent in the European war.

Regrettable Incident

The heated and undignified battle of words that has been carried on by J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI and the Civil Service Commission is most regrettable.

Mr. Hoover maintains that the commission has certified to him persons with criminal records and mental ailments as well as Communists. Only a small group of FBI technical experts have civil service status, all other employes of that agency being exempt. The commission asserts that character investigations for this group have been left to Mr. Hoover's organization in accordance with an understanding to that effect. And in turn it denounces Mr. Hoover as a purveyor of "unreliable" testimony who has "insisted on" working against the commission.

Those who are eager to see the merit system of appointment expanded and strengthened will be deeply concerned to discover that the head of such an important law enforcement agency as the FBI is at loggerheads with the Civil Service Commission.

Undoubtedly methods of selecting Government employes through the merit system can be greatly improved in many cases. Mr. Hoover is not the only administrative official who has cause to be dissatisfied at times with the standards applied in testing the qualifications of applicants for Federal jobs. Nevertheless, the civil service system, with all its shortcomings, is infinitely preferable to a system which would leave the selection of Government workers entirely to departmental heads. Few of them could be trusted to select their subordinates on the basis of merit only, particularly if they owe their own appointments to political influence.

The Civil Service Commission needs, and no doubt welcomes, helpful advice from other governmental agencies. It is an overworked, understaffed organization which is confronted by many difficult problems of method as well as policy. Through the Council on Personnel Administration, the personnel officers of many Government agencies are trying to assist the commission to improve its recruiting processes and increase its efficiency in other respects. Mr. Hoover similarly should employ his influence constructively to strengthen the civil service system at points where he finds it weak.

Without the support and sympathetic cooperation of responsible public officials, the commission would be hopelessly handicapped in its efforts to raise the standards of the civil service.

To Insure Fair Play

In deciding the Waterman Steamship case on Monday the Supreme Court rebuked the Circuit Court of Appeals for assuming a function which, according to Justice Black, Congress has assigned to the National Labor Relations Board.

The lower court had "set aside an NLRB decision on the ground that it was based on mere suspicion rather than substantial evidence. Justice Black's opinion admits that the facts supporting the board's findings are in dispute. But he also informs the court below that it had no right to substitute its own judgment as to the facts for that of the NLRB.

"It is of paramount importance," Justice Black writes, "that courts not encroach upon this exclusive power of the board . . . As it did in setting up other administrative bodies, Congress has left questions of law which arise before the board—but not more—ultimately to the traditional review of the judiciary." As in the case of other recent opinions, this language suggests that the court intends to grant administrative agencies a free hand in selecting the facts on which final decisions shall rest.

There would be little point in setting up administrative agencies such as the NLRB if findings of fact, in cases that arise before them, were left to the courts. The division of function between these quasi-judicial boards and the courts may well be emphasized. On the other hand, the safeguards of judicial review would be seriously weakened if the courts should be denied the right to set aside administrative decisions lacking the support of substantial evidence.

The Labor Relations Act provides that the findings of the board shall be conclusive as to facts only when they are "supported by evidence." In the Waterman case the lower court obviously believed that the decision of the board was not thus supported. The Black opinion did not stop at reversing that judgment; it also appears to have instructed lower tribunals to confine judicial review in the future to questions of law.

The effect of this decision is to throw a great responsibility upon administrative agencies. If the evidence supporting their findings of fact is not to be reviewed in the courts, the need for objective hearings on their part will be greatly emphasized. They will be expected to attain the complete objectivity of courts of law.

So the opinion in the Waterman case may give new impetus to the movement to have the trial examiners of administrative bodies selected by some independent means. Where human rights are at stake findings of fact cannot reasonably be left exclusively to agencies that combine the functions of prosecutor, judge and jury.

The opinion will also arouse new interest in the Walter-Logan bill. That measure, which would regularize the rule-making procedure of the NLRB and comparable agencies and lay down uniform provisions for review of their decisions, is designed to compel adherence of administrative boards to the rules of fair play. The bill was drafted by a committee of the American Bar Association and has the approval of 35 State associations.

As the checks of judicial review are weakened by the Supreme Court, legislative analysis of this vital issue becomes more and more desirable.

War of Attrition

For two weeks now the Red army has been hammering away at the Mannerheim Line in what is evidently the most bitterly contested fighting of the Russo-Finnish war.

According to reports from Helsinki no fewer than five Russian divisions of 15,000 men each are participating in this terrific assault on the Finnish positions, with constant reinforcements thrown into the attack. Yet up to now, despite Russian claims that 61 "defensive fortifications" have been captured, the offensive has not been able to shatter the rock of Finnish resistance. The Mannerheim Line is proving another Verdun.

This legitimate comparison, however, is, in one sense as ominous as, in another, it is encouraging. The French lines held at Verdun even as the Finnish lines are holding on the Karelian Isthmus. But at Verdun the opposing French and German forces were about evenly matched and at the close of the four months battle the dead on the victorious side numbered no fewer than 179,000. The Germans did not pass but France was bled white.

The tenacity of the Russian attack suggests that Stalin, like Falkenhayn in 1916, hopes to succeed by tactics of attrition. The Finns have proved infinitely the better soldiers. The Russians, nonetheless, have the numbers. And if the Red dictator is prepared to be utterly prodigal with the lives of those forced to do his bidding, the Mannerheim Line will ultimately be pierced.

Even if the Finnish casualties are no more than a fifth of those suffered by their enemies, it will be a losing battle. For Russia can draw on a population 50 times that of the little Scandinavian republic whose independence she is trying to crush.

Cutting Live Tissue

It cannot be said that former President Hoover offered a comprehensive remedy for unemployment in his Lincoln day address at Omaha. But he did bring together certain fundamental ideas that point toward a resumption of economic activity on a larger scale, and consequently to creation of new jobs.

Mr. Hoover directed his attention to general policies and to the philosophy underlying free enterprise. He is convinced that "our intellectual approach" to the problem of unemployment in recent years has been defective. And he properly fears that "paralyzing confusion" will continue until the country drops the idea that its whole economic system must be made over, until Government direction of the economic life of the people is abandoned, and deficit financing is brought under control.

There is a real substance in Mr. Hoover's complaint that the prevalent theory is to get rid of the rats by burning the house. "We now deal by law with labor as if it were all sweated," he said. "We deal with agriculture as if every farmer's judgment is weak. We deal with business reform as if all business is evil." The inevitable outcome of this attitude, unless it is checked, will be to unload more and more problems upon a Government unable to solve those which it has in hand.

Mr. Hoover is not alone in fearing that the vicious circle resulting from a loss of initiative and the transfer of responsibilities to the Government will lead to a loss of freedom and further curtailment of initiative. That fear is increasingly expressed by all objective thinkers. There is no solid ground for hope that prosperity can be restored by transferring the obligation of economic planning to a powerful centralized government. And there is very grave danger that continued movement in this direction will irretrievably undermine the strength of free enterprise on which the country has heretofore chiefly relied for its economic well-being.

Certainly Mr. Hoover is right in saying that jobs for our 9,000,000 unemployed can be found only by expanding the Nation's productive powers. Such an expansion can be anticipated only if the spirit of free enterprise, which has been moribund in recent years, can be revived.

Efforts to regain confidence in the future of America and eagerness to explore new fields of economic activity will encounter many difficulties in this confusing age. Nevertheless, the outlook for the unemployed and for the entire country would be much improved if a comprehensive movement were under way to encourage private initiative.

It is now clear that the Government can effectively check abuses in our economic system. But it is equally clear that in eliminating cancerous growths it has cut deeply into the healthy tissue of our economic system.

The current generation is the most expensive one that posterity ever had to finance.

Decadence Of Grapefruit

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

They have been experimenting with the grapefruit down in Florida and have contrived a thing of beauty, a golden gesture that decorates the breakfast table with delight. It was piling it on a bit thick, perhaps, to say that it is sweeter than honey from the honeycomb, or to endow it with the bouquet of that Greek wine the old voluptuary, Aelius Lamius, could never forget. Anyhow, the over-educated palates of 1940 will find it good.

Could there be anything symbolic, we wonder, in the evolution of the grapefruit? It was back in Grover Cleveland's first administration that the gourmets began to speak well of it. As McKinley strode into the White House, waving the full dinner pail, fashionable society nibbled at it. Soon the proletariat was trying to like it. It was a Spartan job. In its original incarnation, the grapefruit's meat was bitter as quinine, its juice was as gall and wormwood. One is almost tempted to say that the mounds of sugar required to make it palatable turned Cuba and Louisiana to raising cane.

Here was a target for that insatiable vice—improvement. California multiplied it. Arizona sweetened it. Texas painted it pink. All the lusty wallop of its primal fury was excised. And now comes the latest Florida edition, which almost asks for vinegar and certainly can be toned up with a jigger of lemon juice.

Somewhere a poet has recently spoken of "the monstrous vulgarities of misapplied science." This denatured grapefruit is a horrible example.

For A Third Term

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Small wonder that President Roosevelt is weary with being prodded as to whether or not he will run for President again.

It is time for the American people to come out boldly and say, "We want Mr. Roosevelt for our President for a third term, because he is the best President the United States of America has ever had, and he has done more good for more people than any other President."

The Democratic Party has fought President Roosevelt on everything he has proposed, and when it was for the good of the people. Let them keep on and they will put a Republican President in the White House!

Stop fighting him! Present the third term to him gracefully as you would a Christmas present to your best friend!

Defends Mr. Autry

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been a Gene Autry fan for a number of years and I had the pleasure of meeting him while he was here.

I am writing this in behalf of Gene—not for argument. I have found no reason to criticize Mr. Autry, either in what I have read about him or when I met and talked with him.

I think if people would use their heads enough to look at a thing from all viewpoints they would find no reason to criticize.

I think Mr. MacGregor's write-up was swell.

The Uses Of Power

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Shades of Cannonism! It was not so long ago that that famous individual strode the halls of Congress and told each and every Congressman how to think, to act and to speak.

Today we have in Congress a small-scale Cannon, who because Martin Dies has seen fit to remain in Orange, Tex., has been catapulted into the realm of "news" and is taking advantage of it to the very hilt. I refer to the Honorable Joe Starnes, acting chairman of the Dies Committee, who during the past two days has chosen to "sit down" upon members of his committee who chose to ask questions of witnesses which he does not feel are proper.

His bouts with Congressman Voorhis have already made the press, but one cannot appreciate their value unless an actual witness to the festivities.

This lowly citizen who has had occasion during the past three years to witness the actions of many Congressional committees, has yet to see a more flagrant use of power than that of Mr. Starnes, and I only hope that Martin Dies gets back in a hurry from Orange, before Mr. Starnes finds he likes the limelight so much that he doesn't want to step down and let Dies take over the reins of his own baby.

Symphony Funds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a former campaign worker, I should like to take this opportunity to advise the management of the National Symphony Orchestra that their present stand against the musician's union has, within the limits of my own experience, seriously and adversely affected the public's support.

The loss of support, I might say, has been due not solely to the anti-union stand, although that has played a very large part, but more particularly to the great question that has been raised in the minds of the public as to the salaries of officials and the conductor, expenses, and general financial accountings of the symphony.

Many people of my acquaintance, who in the past have given liberally to the symphony campaign fund, have indicated to me that unless and until a certified statement of accounts is made available showing, for example, that the symphony does not have adequate funds from its present income to meet the musicians' request for salary increases, they will refuse to lend their support to subsequent campaign drives.

Others have complained of the "bureaucratic" approach of the symphony management in handling questions which are essentially of public interest—namely, whether or not there shall be a campaign drive, and hence whether or not there shall be a public symphony. For an organization that is as completely dependent on public support, the symphony management has shown astounding lack of regard for public sympathy and public will, as well as a complete disregard for the need of public accounting.

Sooner or later, and from present indications it will be sooner, this attitude will redound to the disadvantage of everyone involved—the public, the musicians, and the management itself.

Mounting With Buffalo Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some folks have been having a contest in The Post over the proper way to mount a horse. Thirty-seven years ago I happened to be for a while with Buffalo Bill's outfit, then on continental tour as a big wild West show.

In the sizable dressing tent reserved for the riders and their kit were just about an even 100 riders. They usually huddled in their national groups. There were costumed Gauchos from the pampas plains of Argentina, with saddles thickly padded with sheep pelts. There were cartridge-vested Cossacks from Russian steppes, and their saddles had seats about 10 inches above the horse's back so that the rider loomed rather surveyingly aloft. There were Arabs with their native thoroughbreds, some of them with bridles equipped with blinders.

There were ramrod-straight former British lancers reputed to have done service in India. There were native cowboys from Cuba, and cowboys from Mexico, both featuring sombreros and a showing of silver trappings. There were American cowboys from Texas, Montana, California. There were former United States Cavalry troopers using standard Army saddles.

And, generally most noticed, there were tall, silent American Indians appearing on pinto ponies which they rode without saddle or bridle or blanket and while each Indian was attired only in moccasins, a meager sort of widened G-string, eagle feathers in his hair, a headband, and plenty of gaudy and variegated paint over much of his naked body and arms and legs. The Indians rode with only a single thong of hide as a guiding rein, its front end a close loop about the lower jaw where a metal bit usually goes.

When these "riders of all nations" came with a theatric rush onto the open parade field before the onlooking thousands they were impressively preceded alone by the imposing "Col." William A. Cody, who was Buffalo Bill himself.

"Buffalo Bill," I think, never actually was a colonel, even in some private organization. But he was an experienced plainsman and was employed by the Army in scouting when scattered units of plains Indians seemed to be planning raids. He was engaged also in providing great quantities of buffalo meat to railroad construction camps just after the Civil War.

In all that outfit of Buffalo Bill's selected expert riders from racial and national groups mentioned I never once saw any one of those horsemen mount after first facing backward or laying a hand on a stirrup. Practically every one of those horsemen stood breast toward the horse's ribs and approximately directly opposite the position of the seat of the saddle and, momentarily in that stance, did a sort of military left dress, thus actually facing forward.

The Indians, having no saddles or stirrups, merely lurched up, sprawled, and obtained a leg hold that permitted no bouncing, no rhythmic rising to the trot.

Recently a writer to The Post presented two letters and a drawing to prove his way the only proper and scientific and safe method of mounting a horse. I wouldn't be one to encourage little Washington boys to bet and thus be a party to impairing the morals of youth. But one of their hardened old papas might care to indulge in a series of wagers to provide additional money for Washington's "blood bank."

Here is a list: (1) No certified records can be produced by that writer to prove that he ever saw any person fatally or seriously injured while trying to mount while facing forward. (2) That exponent of the only scientific way to mount a horse never in his life rode an unbroken horse west of the Mississippi. (3) That expert was scarcely old enough to ride a nursery hobby-horse when the World War started. (4) That advocate of the reverse-stance method was city or town born and from an area not more than 500 miles from Philadelphia.

A Butchered Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you please make some editorial comment on the unbelievably unfair amendment passed by the House of Representatives and included in the Ramspeck bill? This stipulates that no one from a State which has civil service workers in excess of its quota can take an examination giving him a chance for civil service under the bill until all States and Territories in arrears fulfill their quotas.

I, a Kansan, have worked hard and faithfully for six years for the Government. But Puerto Rico has less than 10 per cent of its quota of civil service workers and, though it may have no desire nor ability to fill its quota, I am barred until it has done so.

California is more than 1,000 persons under its quota. Californians like California. They don't want to take jobs in the District. Therefore, I, who do and have worked hard and faithfully in my job, may not acquire civil service status. My Congressman voted for that bill. Surely its manifest injustice should not stand. MISS S. BAKER.

The Post Impressionist

"Speaking Of Operations"

Webster defines a tonsil as one of a pair of more or less prominent masses of lymphoid tissue on either side of the throat. As usual, Mr. Webster is adequate but not graphic; I could add more if I were not a lady. Thank goodness, there is not a set of tonsils left in our family, unless they belong to the cat; and if he should develop them we would tie a large stone around his neck, cut a hole in the ice on the river and drop him into the Potomac.

We said good-by to the last pair only a short time ago, when our small daughter shed hers and became one of the Company of the Elect. It was over in no time, and now she is better than new, except that she has a fresh topic of conversation to share with her brother; and if there is anything more morbid than two innocent children who like to discuss their operations, I do not choose to listen.

Donnie, who is 6 and very superior, was not a little baffled when he discovered that Mary was to be his equal; but, after all, a sensation is not to be ignored merely because it happens to someone else. The day before the scheduled event, I was sitting at the desk in my room, eavesdropping as I pretended to write. Mary sat on the bed, sniffing a large and expensive perfume bottle, long since empty, but too impressive to be thrown away. Her brother was making faces into the mirror.

"No, Sissy," he was saying gloomily, "you won't be feeling well this time tomorrow. You'll probably be yelling like anything."

I started to squelch him, but something stilled my voice.

"Does it hurt, Donnie? Bad?"

The blue eyes fastened themselves upon the oracle, smiling not at all as he opened his mouth to an astonishing width and squinched his eyes into mere slits. He opened them just enough to admire himself before answering, and gazed for a moment in rapt wonder at his hideousness.

"Naw." He was casual in his tone, and I was relieved. "All you do is put on a nightgown that looks like an apron, and then get pushed around on a little wagon." This time he opened his eyes very wide and squeezed his mouth into an infinitesimal O. Picking up my lipstick, he looked in my direction, but I shook my head. He put it down regretfully.

"Is that all, Donnie?"

"Oh, no." She clutched the perfume bottle while he pulled his eyes down at the outer corners. There was no use trying to rush him, and she knew it. "They put something over your face and tell you to breathe deep, and you do. It smells sort of sweet and strong." Mary took a long sniff at the ghost of the perfume. "It takes out your tonsils somehow because when you wake up they're gone, and you have a sore throat. Sometimes you yell."

"Did you yell, Donnie?"

He caught my eyes in the mirror and hesitated. "A little, I guess," he admitted.

Mary yelled a little, too, but not enough to matter, and we were able to tell Donnie that she was a credit to him. He was torn between pride and disappointment. "She'll probably cry a lot when she comes home. There she is!" We looked back toward the hospital door to see Daddy come out, bearing a limp little bundle, all wrapped in woolly blankets. She lay quietly in the back seat on Grandmother's lap as we drove home.

Donnie craned over from his position between his father and me. He eyed her critically.

"She looks pretty bad, doesn't she?" Mary stirred under the blankets. "Did you say she cried?"

"No!" growled the invalid.

"Well, I just wondered." He began asking all about it, but Mary turned her head away and he was rebuffed. It was unthinkable that Sissy should not feel like answering back.

As a cheerful companion of the sick, a small boy has no equal. He hovered around like a house cat, knowing that ice cream and fairy stories could be expected at frequent intervals. He eyed the aspergum enviously but restrained himself like a man. The first ordeals of eating were livened by his encouraging comments. Once when I left to answer the telephone, he took over the job of feeding her; I never discovered whether it was by accident or design, but he came out dripping with chicken broth.

Fortunately a child's recuperative powers are phenomenal—a fact which did not interest Mary at all, for she wore her invalidism like a crown, sipping this and that delicacy and speaking in languid whispers. Donnie stood it as long as anyone could expect, and then set out to seek more stimulating company. And we discovered, as have many others, that a wholesome neglect is often the best medicine. Mary stopped her whispering abruptly, marched over to the door and threw it open.

"Donnie!" she shouted. "DONNIE! COME HERE!"

They are playing hospital today. Donnie is the surgeon, and he is preparing to take the tonsils out of a doll named Susie. Decked in a white pinafore and with a handkerchief pinned on her hair, Mary thrusts the very elaborate perfume bottle under the patient's nose. "Smell it!" she commands.

HAZEL SCAIFE DETWILER.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Mayor In Motley

SEVERAL TIMES I have heard Mr. LaGuardia orate on political matters before dressy gatherings of stags, and always our little Alcalde has laid an egg. In each case the company, on the average, was fairly well mulled-up, some individuals being just so many male Ella Booles, it is true, but an equal number at the other extreme being at or close to the yodeling point. The majority were just gently asloshon the tide of their tall scotches, which are taken as vaccination against the food at such rejoicings, plus a few shells of wine which the waiters distribute to one man in ten between courses.

These were not political meetings, but social nights out for suburban Americans of the husband type, and I have noticed that Mr. LaGuardia merely makes passes at his plates and seems to await his turn at bat in a mood like that of Samuel 'All as he listened for the tread of the sheriff's boys in blue.

MR. LAGUARDIA'S worth as a public executive and statesman suffers not at all from the fact that he is neither a comedian nor a humorist. He always overbuilds an anecdote until the edifice falls in on itself and he has to pick his own way out of the debris. Yet he and most other public men of sound reputation feel required somehow to imitate the rowdy professional persifleurs of the night clubs as a preliminary to any intelligent remarks which they have prepared out of their knowledge and experience.

The result is that when the company has kicked over their chairs and scattered to hotel suites around town to take the last half-hour's advantage of a night's permission from home the speaker of the evening has been put down as a disappointment who got where he is by political accidents and newspaper publicity. He is judged solely by the preliminary nonsense which takes up from one-third to two-thirds of his time and usually consists of punk humor badly written by an office statistician and poorly delivered by a man with no knack for jokes.

Far be it from these dispatches to deplore humor, of which the world has nowhere near enough, but many citizens with the gift of government not merely fail but discredit themselves in the role of comic and never should try to be funny. Mr. LaGuardia, giving out on subjects which are in his line of business, deserves attention from any audience, and even Frank Gannett might be listened to with profit, if only by way of refuting the hardy old fallacy that every little boy has a chance to be President.

IT IS NOT my intention to localize this awkwardness. LaGuardia is only one of many who suffer from inability to turn down invitations to unsuitable occasions and try to ingratiate themselves by acting the fool badly. Comedians are a dime a dozen in any agent's office, but comedy, nevertheless, is a trade, and certainly an important statesman shouldn't feel obliged to amuse.

Yet serious men may be seen every night during the banquet season, especially in a Presidential year, putting on their specs and squinting nervously at the notes of lumpy gags as the time comes nigher when they must rear up and lay them in the aisles with a ready flow of preoperative wit, to be followed by six minutes of serious information or pleading.

The banquet, or dinner, incidentally, is peculiarly ill-suited to serious political discussion, because the spirit is alcoholic, and the boys on the fringes always make sneaks during the blackout while the baby-spot is beaming on the toastmaster as he presents the speaker of the evening. The rest, being in no position from which to escape gracefully, feel trapped and resentful and sit there wondering how long this is going to take, instead of relaxing with their pores open to absorb wisdom.

WHY, THEN, do statesmen attend banquets? They make few friends or converts. If the speaker really is a wit, as Jimmy Walker, he never is taken seriously, and if he is clumsy at humor they rate him on that phase of the performance and begrudge him the few minutes that he devotes to intelligent discussion after the traditional period of mirthless nonsense.

I select Mr. LaGuardia for my horrible example because he is a great orator in his own line, but as a comedian he is worse than Olson and/or Johnson, yet invites people to judge him on the important and least of his talents.

Lippmann Column Inadvertently Was Abbreviated

In a discussion of the Republican Presidential candidates yesterday, Walter Lippmann, Post columnist, weighed the relative qualities of Senator Vandenberg, (Republican), of Michigan, Senator Taft, (Republican), of Ohio, and Thomas E. Dewey, of New York.

In a way it is rather bad luck that the election takes place this year rather than two or three years hence. Given a little more time to develop his qualities, Mr. Taft, who has gone so far in one year of public life, would then be as promising a candidate as the Republicans have had for some decades. Because he has had no real experience in reaching great decisions, it is taking a risk to confront him with the critical emergencies which may appear at any time in the course of the coming year. But since he has a rather exceptional capacity for judgment and a disciplined mind, I should suppose that the risk was less in the case of Mr. Taft than in the case of his less plodding but rather more volatile rival.

Hill Novel

BROTHER SIM MOBBERLY, from Troublesome Creek, stood in the pulpit, his fleece of beard seeming to hang in the wind. "Oh, my children," he chanted, "where air we going on this mighty river of earth a-borning, begetting and a-dying?" From Sim Mobberly's words James Still, who was born on Double Creek in the hills of Alabama and lives in a cabin on Dead Mare Branch, Ky., takes the title of his "novel," "River of Earth" (Viking, $2.50).

WHEN ALPHA BALDRIDGE was a kid, Brother Sim preached every burying of her kin; she counted him a saint if one ever walked God's creation. And when her baby died, Alpha wanted Sim for the funeralizing. Father said that since the baby hadn't even learned to walk, there was no need for a big funeral; but Alpha said that everybody that was a-mind to come was asked. She wasn't trying to put a peck measure over the Word of God; she cut the heads off 15 dommers and the last guinea hen, and the stove stayed hot all day Friday, baking and frying. There were enough shucky beans to feed creation, and more cushaw pies than there was table space for.

They set the funeralizing late, when the crops would be in. The sourwood bushes were like fire on the mountains, and the maple leaves were yellow as jaundice. And Uncle Jolly came over the mountains, singing. By good luck he didn't happen to be in jail that month; Uncle Jolly had a habit of pulling logs out of Pate Horn's mill dam on his way up the branch, or of scandalizing Aus Coggins, who, after all, had killed Uncle Jolly's pappy. But they blamed Uncle Jolly for too many of Aus' troubles; the facts did not come out until Grandma Middleton was on her deathbed.

JAMES STILL writes with the smell of the hills in his hair, and the rhythm of mountain speech in his heart. His first book was avowedly poetry, and there is poetry in the rhythm in which "River of Earth" is written. As you read you can hear the redbirds in the plum thickets and smell the pawpaws at first frost, when the spiders' webs gather threads of frost for the morning sun; you know, too, what it means to scrape the bottom of the meat box with a plow blade, hunting for a rind of pork amid the salt when the mines are closed.

For Brack Baldridge was a coal miner; he sneezed above ground all summer, and threw out the yellowrods and stickweed when the children brought them into the house. He didn't mind cold weather, for it meant more days' work in the mines. He didn't mind rain; "rain hain't never lost a day for a miner," he would say. He didn't want to live on a farm, while Alpha lived to hoe corn. Brack's son, who tells the story, dreams of being a horse doctor, and James Still never tells us what his fate may be. But one of the tobacco-spitters in Fruit Corbitt's store was sure. "You can't git above your raising," he said. "Born in a camp and cut teeth on a tipple. Can't tear loose. Whate'er you're aiming to be, you'll end snagging jackrock."

Perhaps it hardly sums up into a novel; perhaps the book is essentially a series of short stories, and the short stories essentially "sketches." But they are sketches composed with art and with restraint, successfully establishing the Baldridges, and their kinfolk and neighbors, in the mist-filled hill country. Inevitably, because both were born close to the mountain ridges of which both write, James Still will be compared with Jesse Stuart. He is a less vigorous writer, but he is a far more finished artist with words.

Private Capital Demand Is Weak, Buckner Reports

By the Associated Press

Thomas A. Buckner, chairman of the board of the New York Life Insurance Co., expressed the opinion Sunday that difficulties encountered by life insurance companies in finding satisfactory investment outlets in recent years were "only a passing phase."

As first witness before the Temporary National Economic Committee, he testified that his company's investment in Government bonds had increased from $56,010,000 in 1932 to more than $700,000,000 at the present time.

"Insurance companies must follow the trend of demand for capital," Buckner commented, "and just now the demand for capital seems to come largely from the United States Government."

U. S. Anticipates Income Tax Gain

By the Associated Press

Treasury officials figure yesterday that Federal income tax returns, due within five weeks, should bring in $350,000,000 during March.

Profitable corporation reports have given some experts hope for even more.

The $350,000,000 would be $50,000,000 more than was collected last March, but still is about $175,000,000 less than the banner month of March, 1938.

Navy Engineers Claim $180,000 in Overtime

Engineers from the Norfolk Navy Yard asked a Senate committee yesterday to clear the way for presentation of their claims for overtime pay totaling $180,000.

The claims were based on contentions of 58 men employed at the Navy Yard from 1891 to 1921 as engineers on locomotives and other steam operated machinery. They contended that the overtime was piled up as a result of requirements that they have their engines ready for operation when the starting whistle blew at eight o'clock in the morning.

Tavenner Backed By Byrd and Glass

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, said yesterday he and Senator Glass had joined in recommending the appointment of Frank Tavenner, assistant district attorney for the Western District of Virginia, to be district attorney.

Joseph Chitwood, now district attorney, recently submitted his resignation, which was accepted to become effective when his successor was named. The Justice Department said ill health was the cause of Chitwood's resignation.

Follies Of Youth

By Ernest Lindley

First Lady And AYC

THE AMERICAN YOUTH CONGRESS has washed itself up as an effective political force. After its performance in Washington this week it will be listened to just about as seriously as Earl Browder.

It is doubtful whether even Mrs. Roosevelt could obtain another hearing for this organization unless it is reconstructed under different leadership. She is entitled to feel badly let down by a group of energetic young people in whom she had placed her confidence. Her tolerance and courage and sympathy for unemployed youth being what they are, she may not feel as badly about the whole affair as many of her friends do.

In behalf of her relations with this organization, however, Mrs. Roosevelt deserves to be credited with more than good intentions. Up to a certain point, at least, her attitude toward the American Youth Congress seems to me, even in retrospect, to have been wise and in the public interest.

THE AYC is and has been largely a paper outfit. Some of the young people's organizations which it claims as members or affiliates are tied to it only through a few of their scattered local units. Others have shown only a nominal interest in its activities, and still others are themselves largely paper outfits. As in all such organizations, the leadership is assumed by a few energetic people, who usually are extreme in their ideas. Only too often the people who fit that description are Communists.

Mrs. Roosevelt came in contact with the group at the top of the AYC—a few bright, zealous young people. They had energy and seemed to be intensely sincere. They seemed to be genuinely interested in the problems of unemployed youth. It was a poor, scraggly organization. If there was Moscow gold back of it, the amount was infinitesimal. Two or three years ago I was solicited for money to help the AYC to get its telephone reconnected. A friend of mine who was also solicited investigated and found that the organization owed money to the printer and several other parties.

In my occasional contacts with these young people, some of them seemed to me to be under the domination of Communist thought, whether or not they were party members. Others seemed to me to be simply earnest young people who didn't quite know what they believed in. They were plastic. Depending upon the influences to which they were subjected, they might have become almost anything.

MRS. ROOSEVELT, it is still my opinion, rendered a distinct public service by giving these young people a hearing, by making them feel that our democratic Government was interested in the problems of youth and that they could and should work through the forms of democracy. I think that by doing this she discouraged the growth of antidemocratic radicalism among a group of vocal and potentially influential young people.

Whether Mrs. Roosevelt was wise in going further, by making herself the leading patroness of the American Youth Congress was a question in my mind long before the gathering in Washington this week. Without the prestige which she lent to it, the organization probably would have faded out of existence.

The crowd which met in Washington, of course, was not representative of American youth or of unemployed American youth. Nor was it, I would guess, representative of even the more active affiliates of the American Youth Congress. As at all such open meetings, the zealots attended and the noisiest were heard. How many Communists were present I haven't the slightest idea, probably not more than a handful. The Communist brand rests on the organization because its switch on foreign policy coincided with the Soviet Union's.

THE PRESIDENT converted the occasion into a political gain. John Hamilton drew first but he only knicked the corner of the target, whereas the President shot out the bull's-eye.

There were only two unfortunate results. The first was that a lot of people got the American Youth Congress confused with the National Youth Administration. The latter is a government agency which provides jobs, training, and education for unemployed youth, for an amazingly small amount of money. It has no connection with the American Youth Congress.

Secondly, as Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out afterward, the real plight of unemployed youth—some 3,500,000 of them—was lost sight of. The President's implication that youth don't have more trouble getting jobs now than they had 10 or 20 years ago grated on many nerves. I hope the whole unemployment problem is not going to be dismissed so lightly.

Recruits From Down Under

NEWS OF the arrival at Suez this week of the first contigent of Australian and New Zealand troops reads like a page out of the past.

It was just over a quarter of a century ago that the first Australian troops landed in Egypt to participate in the World War on the Allied side. They, or rather their sons, are back to fight in a conflict which, in large measure, is only the continuation of the last.

The pull of empire, the belief in a common destiny, the thousand and one ties of history, language, tradition, blood, have operated this time as they did in 1914 to reaffirm the solidarity which obtains among the governments and peoples of the British Commonwealth of Nations, particularly in times of great crisis.

NOT ALL THE BITTER memories of Gallipoli, not all the disillusionment with the peace of 1918, which proved to be not a peace at all but only a troubled armistice, not even the rise of the dominions to full nationhood have destroyed that capacity for common action which the component parts of the Commonwealth manifested 25 years ago. They are demonstrating that same capacity today.

During recent years much has been made of the centrifugal forces operating in the British Empire. The self-governing dominions have undoubtedly shown an increasing tendency to go their own way. The control which London once exercised at Ottawa and Canberra, Wellington and Pretoria—not to mention Dublin—has disappeared.

Every one of the dominions could, had it so desired, have remained neutral, even as Ireland has done. In South Africa, a powerful faction headed by Gen. Hertzog has been urging precisely such a course. But Canada, New Zealand Australia and South Africa are all in the war and, with the exception of South Africa, have already sent troops to Europe.

IN JUSTIFICATION of the course which Germany has pursued in central and eastern Europe and which Russia is following in Finland, it has been argued that there are black pages in the history of other empires, not least the British. The partial truth of this charge cannot be denied, even though it ignores the fact that the perpetration of past wrongs is no excuse for their indefinite continuance.

It is also pointed out that while Great Britain professes to be fighting for democracy in Europe it is denying democratic rights to the peoples of India. There is a point to this contention, too. Yet there is nothing in Nazi or Bolshevik rule over subject peoples comparable to the succession of India Acts which for a generation have given to the Indians an increasingly larger measure of self-government.

Indeed, the Indian leaders, including Mohandas K. Gandhi, recognize that distinction. That is why, even while demanding immediate dominion status, they hesitate to place any obstructions in the way of Britain's war effort. They dislike British rule. But they have far less use for Hitler. In comparison with what the Nazis are doing in Poland, British rule in India is a paradise.

THE AUSTRALIANS and the New Zealanders who arrived at Suez this week came that long distance from their homes in the Antipoles without compulsion. They came because they wanted to, and because it was the will of their nations to join the Allies.

In the belief of the dictators, the exercise of such freedom of will should make for weakness and confusion. They prefer to place their reliance on compulsion. So to bring about that unity which is needed in wartime they find it necessary to resort to Draconian measures, each more repressive than the last. Yet, from every indication, the unity which obtains in Great Britain and France is far greater than the unity which Hitler and Stalin boastfully claim for the peoples they rule with iron hands.

One must also contrast the way the Poles, the Jews, the Czechs and the Slovaks are being made to serve the war machine of Germany's All Highest with the way the British Commonwealth is operating to achieve a united effort.

In Germany the rulers must keep ever in mind the possibility of a revolt of the subject peoples who form part of what the Nazis claim is Germany's Lebensraum. They must keep one eye on the enemies outside the borders and another on those at home. And in the long run this dual war which they are compelled to wage may lead to their undoing.

The British Empire is and remains strongest at the points where it is freest. Historians of the future may say, on the other hand, that the day the Germans lost their freedom that day they lost the war.

Visiting Nurse Board Opposes Health Shift

The board of directors of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society yesterday opposed any municipal reorganization which would make it mandatory for the District's next health officer to be chosen from Federal ranks.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president, presided at the directors' monthly meeting, at which it was reported that 14,120 visits were made to 4,792 patients in January, an increase of 256 and 1,240, respectively, over the previous month.

Management Group To Dine Tonight

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Home, Sweet Home

HAVE YOU PAID any attention to some of those new houses that are going up around the country these days? And, if so, haven't you wondered whether they were being built for life occupancy or for a one-act play?

Lumber seems to be the one thing in which any economy is being shown in America.

In building the old-fashioned American home it used to take a half-dozen trucks to bring the necessary lumber. Today it looks as if it were all delivered on one bicycle.

Those new homes look pretty, but you would never call them sturdy. This correspondent leaned on a bannister in one of those modern houses the other day and almost fell into the lower hall. Remember the days when the bannister was so rugged the whole family could slide down it at one time?

The whole stairway in this home appeared to have been designed and constructed by men who thought it was going to be used only by Singer midgets.

The spindles might have been made from abandoned golf club shafts.

And the railing was so thin you could put your hand around it and still complain of a loose grip.

And the walls and doors! Boy, were they examples of what could be done with assorted wafers!

In the home of yesterday the walls were there for keeps. You could pound on 'em with a sledge hammer without getting an echo. But tap on these walls of the house of today with your bare knuckle and you get the same sound you get when you drum on a hatbox.

In the pioneer days, papa used to slam junior against the wall of the living room now and then in the interests of discipline and junior would bound right back. Push him against the walls of today and he would come out the other side and penetrate the wall of the next nearest room.

The trend in doors seems to have gone definitely from strength to sheer whimsy.

When mother slammed the door in the old days it shook the entire neighborhood. If she slams it today it just destroys a door and puts the whole house out of alignment.

A person accustomed to going through paper hoops wouldn't even need a key to get in and out.

And have you noticed the way they get an effect of bigness by building a garage on a line with the bungalow and linking it to the main building by a trellis? Can you imagine how it would look if they let the house stand on its own and put the garage back in the lot like they used to?

Oh, well, it's something for Uncle Sam to worry about, not you. He's got the mortgages.

Hearts and Flowers for Her Valentine Today

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

HEARTS and flowers will probably never cease spelling romance on St. Valentine's Day. If they do for the male of the species, he must be losing his gaip, for florists throughout America report that sentimental flower offerings are becoming ever more essential to the man who has a courting glint in his eye.

If you are such a man, here are hints on the constantly changing fashions in flowers—suggested for distinct and different types of girls. You might send fresh gardenias and roses combined on little combs if you want her to wear her heart on her sleeve tonight when you take her dancing. Corsages of violets are flattering if she's the romantic sort and carries a small barrel muff. Twin bouttonnieres of small tight pink camellias are suitable if she's the tailored suit type. If her hands are her loveliest feature, fresh flower wristlets in baby orchids or gardenias showering streamered hearts would help her use those hands even more gracefully.

And if you're a tactful swain—and the lady you adore is not as slim as she used to be—pin a corsage of narcissus at her throat rather than on her shoulder. It attracts less attention to her largess. But, if her waist is really "wasp" sized, help her tuck a bunch of carnations and cornflowers into her belt to stress her slimness. Even if you're in Hoboken as you scan these Valentine hints, and she's States apart, the telegraph acts as instant intermediary in your distress.

Expert Tells How to Cut Grocery Bill

Finds High Percentage Of Vitamins In Low-Cost Foods

By Ida Jean Kain

WITH SO large a slice of the family income going for food, the home-maker is intensely interested in ways and means of stretching the food dollars. On close inspection, it is found that the grade of food used, the quantity purchased, and the knack of judging bargains have a big effect on the grocery bill.

In the process of planning low-cost menus that are nutritionally adequate, Miss ue Sadow, home economics expert, has made use of all the tricks that enable the shopper to buy the best for the least money. Some of these short-cuts will be familiar to you but among them you may find several that are new.

One of Miss Sadow's first tips on marketing is that you notice the weights given on the cans of food. Only by a comparison of the number of ounces of the different brands will tell you whether or not a "special" is actually a bargain.

All Kinds of Greens

It is important to keep in mind the fact that foods high in the protective elements can be purchased at varying prices. There are all kinds of greens, high and low in price. The low-cost ones contain as high a percentage of the vitamins and minerals as those which are more expensive.

It is never economical, however, to buy greens that have wilted or aged—they have lost too much of their protective value. The vegetables that are tender and young are always the best buys. They contain a higher percentage of the vitamins and minerals than the old roots and leaves.

As Miss Sadow points out, it always pays to take advantage of the seasonal fruits and vegetables and to give your family liberal quantities of these while they are available at the low price. Shopping around may save pennies that amount in time to dollars. One store may have cabbage at six cents a pound, another may sell it for three!

Dark Breads More Nutritive

Day-old bread often is obtainable at a cost far less than that of fresh bread. It is just as high in protective value. But keep in mind the fact that you get more for your money, nutritionally speaking, when you buy the dark breads.

Miss Sadow is a firm advocate of the old-time practice of marketing once a week or even less often. Staples and canned goods can be purchased more economically in large quantities.

The following food allowances are recommended: Two-sixths of the food money for milk; one-sixth for bread and cereals, with emphasis on the whole grain variety; one-sixth for vegetables and fruit; one sixth for meat, fish, eggs, cheese; one-sixth for fats, sugars, beverages, seasonings.

The difference between a good diet and a poor one is ascertained by the protective elements included rather than by the money spent. Tomorrow's article will deal with the lower-cost meats.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl's Social Life Is Spoiled by Parents' Rule: "Home by Midnight;" What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 20, and for three years I have been going with a young man who is now 21. But during that time my parents have never allowed me to stay out later than 12 o'clock. When I go to a movie I have to be home by 10:15. If I go to a party, I must be home by midnight. Once in high school I went to a prom. After the prom most of the crowd stopped at a "hot shop" for something to eat. I went along and didn't get in until 12:20. My parents were out looking for me.

You know yourself that parties don't start until 9 or 10 o'clock, and I no sooner get there than I have to start home. I have become so nervous from this that I am not fit to work. (I hold a good position.) I am scared to death all the time I am out, afraid I'll be a few minutes late getting home.

My parents are very prominent in the community and I have always tried to do everything to please them. But lately we are having one argument after another. They seem to like my boy friend, but they even fuss at me in front of him now. He says lately that he can't understand their attitude toward me, always nagging about every little thing. All my friends are beginning to feel sorry for me. Can you think of any way to solve this predicament? MARIE.

It's Ill Wind That Blows Nobody Good

DEAR MARIE: I assume you are an only child, since you make no mention of brothers and sisters sharing your tribulations. Combine this with the fact that your parents are "very prominent in the community," and one begins to understand (a) their uncontrollable anxiety when you are out after dark; (b) their excessive interest in your every move, which expresses itself in a running fire of critical comment and supervisory suggestion, and (c) their prideful desire to curb you to a pattern of what they consider to be "model" behavior.

However, one can understand something of their motives without excusing their unfortunate performance. They would say they are motivated by loving concern for your welfare. Actually, they are more self-engrossed than unselfish. In attempting to keep you under their wing they are trying to lighten the burden of their parental responsibilities.

Leading a child around by the nose is not the intelligent, far-sighted, generously loving parent's way of keeping a child from harm. On the contrary, he schools the child in self-reliance from the cradle upward, combining precept and example with an ever-widening variety of suitable opportunities for independent social experience. But this instructive, developing kind of supervision is an executive assignment of the first magnitude, which too many parents seek to evade.

Rather than take the trouble to help their children really to grow in understanding of life and competence of living, they follow what is, for them, the path of least labor, namely: that of perpetuating infantile dependence. This may spare them effort, up to a certain point; but it is a dangerous substitute for character building. The child who is endowed with normal mental and physical energy is likely to feel driven, eventually, by the very instinct of social self-preservation, to revolt against such humiliating dominance.

In grasping desperately at freedom, he may find himself out of the frying pan into the fire, simply because he wasn't properly trained to play the game of life according to its vastly complicated rules. Yet if he gets into trouble, parents like yours will say, "I told you so"—holding the child to blame and piously justifying their ill-advised despotism instead of paying the penalty for their own rigid short-sightedness.

There is no easy, immediate solution of your problem. If your parents cannot be persuaded to a new concept of their responsibility—i. e., to a sympathetically cooperative rather than an inflexibly despotic attitude—then you must contain yourself in patience until you are of legal age and thus free to run your own life. In the meantime, don't feel sorry for yourself, even though your friends may patronize you with pity.

Keep your chin up. It's an ill wind that blows nobody good. Perhaps your unusually strict rearing may pay dividends in a distinctly feminin eperso nality—of the gentle and sensitive variety that sometimes seems to be disappearing from the modern scene.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her, in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Ham Sticks at Tea

Try ham sticks at your next tea; they're a new winter treat. Roll rich biscuit dough a quarter inch thick. Spread a thick, chopped ham salad relish on half of it. Fold the other half of the dough over the filling and press it down. Cut into thin strips with a sharp knife. Press the edges of each strip together with a fork to keep the filling in and prick the tops for decoration. Bake 7 minutes on a shallow ungreased pan in a moderate oven.

Noodles Romanoff

Is a Flavorful Lenten Dish

A FLAVORFUL, unusual and practical Lenten dish that is easy to make is Noodles Romanoff. The seasonings suggested give a very interesting blend of flavors. But the amounts may be adjusted to taste, using less of each if desired. For young children take out part of the noodle-cheese-cream mixture before adding the garlic, Tabasco and Worcestershire sauce and bake it separately. The following is the recipe for making this dish:

Noodles Romanoff

Cook one 5 or 6-ounce package egg noodles (2 to 3 cups uncooked until tender in 3 quarts boiling water to which 1 tablespoon salt has been added. Drain. Mix in lightly, 1 cup cottage cheese—dry or creamed (½ pint), 1 cup sour cream, ¼ cup finely chopped onion, 1 clove garlic, minced very fine, 1 to 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, according to taste, a dash of Tabasco sauce or red pepper and ½ teaspoon salt. Place in buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Serves 4 to 6.

Transfer Hint

Here is a way to transfer a quilt pattern without leaving a mark: Baste four or five quilt blocks together. Tightly baste on the pattern. Unthread the sewing machine and "sew" through the pattern. Follow the holes on the blocks for the design.

Budget Your Income Tax

HAUNTED by bills—actually embarrassed to pass shops where you have accounts overdue!

How much more comfortable your state of mind when you go on a budget plan. To avoid running up excessive bills you allot fixed amounts to rent, food, clothes, recreation, other items. And you have a program to pay off bills now hanging over your head.

If you arrange to pay no more than a week's income for a month's housing—unlikely that any irate landlord will hammer on your door for overdue rent.

How much should you allow for your commissary department, if your income's $130 a month? For a family of four, about $10 a week or 30 per cent of your income will be enough—if you plan meals ahead, balance your chicken-and-ice-cream dinner with a stew-and-brown-betty meal the next day.

To keep your clothes expenditures within $15 a month, or about 11 per cent of your income, take an inventory of clothes on hand when about to buy new ones. If you choose a new dress or hat to harmonize with the accessories you already have, you'll cut expenditures, have smarter costumes.

And to get your finances out of the red, lump together your back debts. Decide how much you can allow each month toward the total and then apportion this amount among your accounts till all are paid. Soon you're debt free—can get money ahead for a car, for what you want most!

Assembling the Crowd

"George! George! We're going now! . . . Tell Oscar . . . Now where's Elsie? . . . Yes, I told her we were going . . . Well, maybe she's out getting her wraps. Are you ready, Mrs. Mosey? . . . Now, we're going to take you and Mr. Mosey—Oh, yes, indeed now, we are too!—say, where is Mr. Mosey? . . . Well, he was here a minute ago. George, hunt up Mr. Mosey . . . Yes, right away! We want to get away before the rush.

"Now, who else is there? . . . Oh, yes, Miss Flitter! Now, Oscar and Elsie are going to drop off Miss Flitter and Jed—Say, where is Jed? . . . Oh, Oscar, maybe you'd better go find Jed—and Miss Flitter.

"Now, Mrs. Mosey, let's you and I go on and get our wraps—I think Elsie's out there—while George and Oscar are rounding up the others. Now, if we can just get ahead of the mob. I simply can't stand to be in crowds, can you? . . . Oh, is that you, Mrs. Gadd? You know, I thought I was talking to Mrs. Mosey . . . Yes, she was right at my side a minute ago. Now, where on earth—oh, there she is! Mrs. Mosey! Mrs. Mosey! . . . I thought I'd lost you.

"Well, here we are! Now if we can just find our checks—say, Elsie's not here! I thought she'd come out to get her wraps . . . Well, I guess I'd better go back and look for her—oh, here's Oscar and Miss Flitter! . . . Say, Oscar, we can't find Elsie! . . . Why, I haven't the slightest idea! . . . Well, see first if she's gone to the elevator.

"Now, Miss Flitter, Oscar and Elsie are going to drop you and Jed—say, do you know where Jed is? . . . Well, when did you see him last? . . . Which Malay princess? . . . In the white turban? Oh—that woman!

"Wasn't Elsie at the elevator, Oscar? . . . Well, then, I suppose she's still inside. And say, Oscar, get hold of Jed, too, will you? . . . Well, he's talking to some Malay princess . . . Oh, I mean some woman dressed that way.

"Mrs. Mosey, you'd better go on and get your coat—and say, you'd better be careful! There's a lot of rabbit skins here . . . What, Miss Flitter? Well, I guess you'd have time—if you'd hurry.

"Now here comes George and Mr. Mosey . . . Say, George, did you see anything of Elsie? . . . Or Jed" . . . Miss Flitter? . . . Oh, she'll be back in a minute. She says Jed was talking to some Malay princess—no, no, George, you needn't go! No, Oscar's looking for him! No, you stay right here! We don't want anyone else to get lost.

"Well, let's get our wraps on so we'll be ready—Oh, here comes Elsie! Where on earth have you been, Elsie? . . . The Putters? Are THEY here? I really ought to run back and speak to them, but I don't want us all to get lost again . . . Well, all right, George, you go, but don't be a minute!

"Here comes Miss Flitter. Now we're all here but Oscar and Jed—and George . . . What, Elsie? Oh, Oscar went to get Jed away from some Malay princess—where are you going, Elsie? . . . Well, all right, but hurry! And don't come back without 'em.

"Well, here's four of us, anyway—now what became of Mr. Mosey? . . . What? . . . They can't find his overcoat? . . . Well, what did they do with it? . . . Have they looked thoroughly? . . . Oh, there, he has it! Now, let's all stay close together until the others get here. Oh, here comes Elsie! With Jed! And George! And Oscar!

"Good work, Elsie! You know, the next party I go to I'm going as a Malay princess. Now, let's all saunter toward the elevator—what, Mrs. Mosey? . . . The wrong coat! . . . Let's see! . . . Why, that's not your Hudson seal! They've given you one of those rabbit skins! Say, Check Girl! Check Girl!

"Now, let's all stick real close together and try to go down on the same elevator . . . Don't let anybody separate us. George, you're getting lost! Elsie, hold on to Oscar! Are you there, Mrs. Mosey?

"Oh, here's an elevator! . . . Yes, yes, there's room for all of us! . . . Yes, come on in, Jed! Let's all stick together, now. We don't want to get lost again. Now, are we all here? . . . George? . . . Elsie? . . . Oscar? . . . Where's Miss Flitter and Jed? . . . Oh, I see! . . . Mrs. Mosey? . . . Mr.—Say, WHERE'S Mr. Mosey? . . . Didn't he get on? . . . Good heavens! Mr. Mosey's missed the elevator!

Movie Star Likes Kidneys on Toast

William Powell, the cinema's "thin man," thinks Kidneys on Toast a very special dish for breakfast. He has an old recipe for preparing this dish and wants to share it. Here it is:

Kidneys on Toast

Take out the center tube of the lamb kidneys, but do not remove the little piece of fat. Skin and split. Drop the kidneys into boiling water to sear the outside and keep the gravy in the kidney. Fry a few rashers of bacon. Place the kidneys in the bacon fat and fry them gently on both sides over a fairly slow fire, turning them constantly. Serve with a sprinkling of chopped parsley.

An excellent gravy can be made by pouring a little water into the frying pan after removing the finished kidneys, and stirring with a fork. Toast and coffee should accompany this delicacy, says Mr. Powell.

Typists at Florida Beaches Top Smart Set For Good Looks; Beauty Regimes Given

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13.

LAST Saturday night, a few days before I took off for the beaches of Florida, I had the pleasure of attending the fifth annual stenographer's ball in New York, which is a high class shoe-shaking for the benefit of the ladies who smack the keys.

I have attended dozens of nobby hops attended by the alleged swells for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the men who fell in defense of Premzyl and such worthy causes. But never in all my puff did I see a larger group of prettier and better groomed girls than I did at this typists' twist.

Alice Hughes

The reason is so easy to see that I am almost ashamed to mention it. The cuties of the social set groom and dress for the benefit of the cameramen, in the publicity-crazy night spots of the upper east side.

The stenographers, on the other hand, do it for real reasons. Their employers like to look upon well-dressed, properly groomed secretaries, as is their right. They want their customers to be received graciously by such girls. As a result, the stenographers of New York need bow to no one in the matter of good looks and things. They are tops.

Polling the five queens of this party, they list five necessities for their well-being, as follows: Exercise, sleep, personal cleanliness raised to the nth power, simple effective cosmetics, and the proper diet. Genevieve Barnett spends the last hour before bedtime in nurturing her bodily and facial health and beauty. She'd rather roller skate than dance on Saturday nights, for the sake of exercise, and the boy friend had better like it. Margaret Klein, who is blonde and blue eyed, goes to ballet class once a week to maintain her curves at the proper ratio.

Admiral Says Ship Is Called 'She' Because of Paint, Powder Cost

Chief of Navigation Also Explains To Navy Sponsors Why a Man Can't Belong; Annual Luncheon Draws Big-Wigs in Droves

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHY A SHIP IS A "SHE," and why men are not members of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy—were questions answered in a letter written by Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and read yesterday at the society's annual luncheon at the Mayflower.

HOPE R. MILLER

It seems that some time ago a man, ambitious to be a naval sponsor and learning that only persons who has christened a ship could be, asked Admiral Nimitz why that honor was never given to men. Thinking it over, the admiral at first was at loss for an answer since, as he expressed it, this is supposed to be a day and age of "equality of the sexes."

His conclusions, however, according to the letter, were that it is far more suitable for women to do the christening, since ships, too, are ladies. He further expressed the opinion that a ship is a "she" because it costs so much to keep her in paint and powder; and because, among other reasons, "only a she would feel at home on the bosom of a swell."

Several dozen women who are members of the society, and their guests heard Mrs. Russell C. Langdon, of New York, president of the society read the letter. Mrs. Langdon also read a message from the President and introduced the two speakers of the occasion, Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, and the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark.

Valentine Accent In Decorations

Always a gay party, the society's annual luncheon traditionally draws naval bigwigs in droves, and yesterday was no exception. The west dining room of the hotel was the scene of the colorful event, attended by 140 persons. At a long table on a raised platform sat Mrs. Langdon, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Edison, Admiral and Mrs. Stark, and a number of other notables.

Twelve round tables, seating ten members and guests, also filled the spacious room. Mixed spring flowers, featuring snapdragons, sweetpeas and roses, stemmed from large baskets and alternated with tall white tapers to decorate the tables. A romantic note was introduced in the candy-filled, heart-shaped baskets that adorned either end of the head table.

Navy Notable There in Droves

Notables seated there were Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. R. Furlong, Rear Admiral Alexander H. Van Keuren, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ben Moreell, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter Anderson, the Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George Pettengill, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land and Capt. and Mrs. Dudly Knox.

Among others seen in the throng were Mrs. Wilson Lee, Mrs. James M. Helm, Miss Virginia Hunt, Capt. and Mrs. Paul H. Bastedo, Mrs. Goldsborough Adams, Mrs. J. D. Adams, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Dr. and Mrs. Richard A. Kearny, Mrs. Wright Craig, Mrs. Frank Slingluff, Miss Janet Richards, Mrs. Donald Bingham, Mrs. E. H. Wilson, Miss Beryl H. Joslin, Mrs. Jennings Bailey, jr., Capt. and Mrs. Clarence Hinkamp, Col. and Mrs. William A. Mitchell, Capt. and Mrs. Bryson Bruce and many more.

Washington Society Manifests Interest In Session of Republican National Committee

WITH THE REPUBLICANS bursting into the headlines again after months of comparative obscurity, Washington society is very much interested in the meeting of the national committee called for Friday Committeemen and women from here to Seattle will gather in the Capital and between conferences will whirl from one party to another.

Of particular interest to the Capital is the news that both Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms will be on hand. Mrs. Simms, the former Ruth Hanna McCormick, has been so much on the front pages lately as active in Thomas Dewey's campaign that one is apt to forget that her husband is equally distinguished. Like her he was a member of Congress for some years, and still takes part in politics in New Mexico. He is also a rancher and a banker. On his farm near Albuquerque he has conducted many agricultural experiments.

THE ENTIRE DELEGATION has been invited by Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg to a tea tomorrow at her Wardman Park apartment. Mrs. Vandenberg returned from New York with a bad cold but hopes to be on her feet again in time for the party. Only the delegates and a few newspaper friends of the hostess have been invited, as her apartment is not enormous and she wisely refuses to wedge people in.

Despite the fact that Senator Vandenberg is not generally regarded as much of an internationalist politically, his attractive wife did her bit while in New York by attending the Finnish relief cabaret at the Waldorf and giving a dinner at the new Polish restaurant on Fifty-seventh street. She reports that this new eating spot does not depend only on sympathy for trade, but offers delicious Polish dishes and has unusually attractive decorations.

In Mrs. Vandenberg's party were her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pfeiffer (she was Betty Vandenberg, the talented pianist); Mrs. Richmond Temple, who has frequently visited here, Carl Van Henkelon, Mrs. Maurice Simons and Mrs. Alex Green.

SPEAKING OF Finnish relief—at the brilliant Waldorf Astoria party Washington's own Mrs. Harold Sims won the de Beers diamond. Mrs. Sims, whose husband is Attache of the British Embassy, immediately returned the jewel to be auctioned. After much coaxing and wheedling, Miss Lawrence sold the gem to Tommy Manville for $360.

MARILYNN HIMES' debutante career has been temporarily interrupted by appendicitis. She has just returned to her home near Frederick, Md., from the hospital, but now Mr. Himes has taken her place there.

AUCHINCLOSS HOSPITALITY continues out at Merrywood, their Virginia home, even when Mr. and Mrs. Auchincloss are not there. Before leaving for Jekyll Island they phoned several friends and told them to come out any time to use their badminton court, and the butler would serve them drinks afterward.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Auchincloss will give a leap year dance—which reminds us that Dr. Paul Popenoe, head of the Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, said in a recent interview that it's hardly worth while for women to pop the question. After making a marriage study for 50 years, he found that he had a record of only 129 feminine proposals, out of which 50 were turned down flat.

"Perhaps it is because women make such a dreary job of proposing," says he. "Men may be clumsy when offering themselves in marriage, but they are far better at it than women. Our reports indicate that it's a rare girl who shows any enthusiasm when she's proposing. They go at it in a tone of melancholy utterly lacking in charm, as if it were a disagreeable job that had to be tackled."

Besides, Dr. Popenoe made another survey which showed that men like to do the chasing—so Washington bachelors really needn't worry.

Tuesday Event To Aid France

A "Marche aux Pouces," French equivalent of London's famous flea market, will be staged on Tuesday, March 5, by a group of Capital ladies interested in aiding war victims in France.

Yesterday members of the committee met at the home of Mme. Lombard, wife of the French military attache, to discuss plans for the benefit over a cup of tea. Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, who maintained an apartment in Paris for many years, is chairman.

Others who met for tea yesterday included Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. Randolph Miner, Mrs. Prentiss Coonley, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Miss Lydia Loring, Mrs. George Maurice Morris and Miss Elizabeth Howry.

The sale will be held from 10 until 6 at 1536 Connecticut avenue. Everybody is being asked to donate old clothes, bric-a-brac, and many other objects. In addition, a cake and candy sale will be held.

Luise Rainer Charms Women of the Press

Actress Doesn't Make a Speech; Just Answers Questions of Mrs. Grady; Describes Hollywood as Lonely

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

You don't have to make a speech—just answer questions—to win your audience if it's the Women's National Press Club.

Luise Rainer, star of "Escapade," "The Good Earth" (you name all the others) proved it yesterday when she was guest of honor at the club's weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel. She said she could not make speeches but offered to answer questions. Mrs. Henry T. Grady, seated next her at the head table, promptly asked her, "What took you to the stage?" and then came the whole story, told with the simplicity and appeal that characterize the actress both as an artist and as an individual.

She mentioned her strict upbringing, told how she went backstage following a play she attended while visiting her grandparents, and her confusion and embarrassment when asked why she was there; how that occasion eventually resulted in her being given an audition, a part in a play and then a contract . . . "Before anyone even knew I wanted to be an actress, I had the contract," she said. "The first play came out for some reason, I don't know why, a big success."

Took the Chance To See America

Then followed productions under Max Reinhardt in Berlin and Vienna.

"Metro and Fox sent people over to Vienna to look at me—and they looked at me. I didn't even think of becoming a movie person; (stars I didn't even know about). I thought in the movies I would be terrible for I was not beautiful. Then Metro-Goldwyn offered me a contract for half a year and said I could go home if I didn't like it. I thought, what a good chance to see America, so I said I would come."

She told of her arrival at the pier, how she was met by a few people who looked her over but decided she was not glamorous enough to be Luise Rainer. "Everybody had someone who came for them except me," she said.

Finally, when her baggage, marked "L. R.," identified her, she was taken to a hotel with her dog, Johnnie.

"They didn't think I was glamorous enough. They didn't know what to do with me, so they put me in a hotel I did not know anyone in New York and it was lonely except that I had Johnnie," she said.

Moved to Ocean For Reality

Then she and Johnnie were started on their way to Hollywood and had "long conversations on the train about things we saw in the fields." In Hollywood, taken for a drive through Metro-Goldwyn studio, she was amazed at its fantastic proportions. "But I was uncomfortable for everybody," she said, "I spoke only French or German, I wasn't a star; I was nobody. So they left Johnnie and me at the hotel and forgot us."

She explained she took a place on the ocean "because I knew the ocean could not be made by Metro—it was real," and there she stayed with her little dog.

She knew the picture, "Escapade," was being made and wanted the part, but thought if they considered her for it they would notify her. Myrna Loy was cast in it, then walked out of the studio because of a disagreement. Later, an executive happened to see Miss Rainer on the beach with her dog; suddenly realized she was from Vienna; asked her why she hadn't shown an interest in the part; rushed to the studio, and she was called to take the role.

"They looked at me, and thought 'She is terrible!' But they put some good makeup on and I was no more so terrible." And so began her American career.

She loves America, thinks they are doing wonderful things in Hollywood, but calls it the loneliest place in this country. She likes Washington, and will be here a month longer rehearsing with the Washington Civic Theater for "Saint Joan," to be given the week of March 10 for the benefit of the Red Cross. It is a part she played in Europe when she was 17, and will be her first stage role in the United States.

Parents Urge Hot Water For Schools

Board Restates Stand For New Structure For Receiving Home

The board of managers of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, at its February meeting yesterday, adopted a resolution indorsing the installation of hot-water facilities in all public school buildings not so equipped. It was pointed out that 60 white schools have no such provision.

The board also restated its previous stand in favor of the erection of a suitable new structure for the Receiving Home and in opposition to further repairs on the present building.

It urged the restoration to the budget of the total sum of $856,025 asked for the repair of school buildings and grounds and recommended that the Board of Education be given full responsibility for expenditure of money for such repairs. At present, the board furnishes estimates of the needed work, but not only the actual repairs, but also the expenditure for them is left to the District Repair Shop.

The parent-teacher board, in its resolution also petitioned Congress to investigate the overhead and upkeep of the District Repair Shop together with the efficiency of management so far as it concerned the schools of the District.

Donations of $10 each were voted to the blood bank and to the incubator project sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary to the District Medical Association.

Founders' day will be observed Tuesday, at 1:30 p. m., with a program in the board room of the N. E. A. Building. Young, will include reception of founders' day gifts from local parent-teacher units.

A tribute to the memory of Mrs. John R. Moss, an active member of the Shepherd Parent-Teacher Association, whose tragic death occurred just before Christmas, will be read by Mrs. James C. Wilkes.

Women Voters Study Housing

Alexandria has as acute a housing problem as any city of its size in the country, members of the department of economic welfare of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters learned yesterday. They were addressed at a luncheon at Wesley Hall by Miss Ellen Harper, director of the Alexandria branch, WPA Real Property Survey, and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, of the Montgomery County Housing Authority Board, in a symposium on Suburban Housing. Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, of the Washington Housing Association, presided.

Miss Harper said the influx of families from the District since 1930 had resulted in an urban housing problem in Alexandria which prompted the Council of Social Agencies, in 1938, to persuade the city council to make a survey to determine housing needs. It showed, she said, that 19 per cent of the homes were sub-standard. The Housing Authority, by authorization of the City Council, plans to build 130 units for white families and 110 for colored, in low-income groups.

Mrs. Clapper discussed the rural aspect of housing in Montgomery County and told of plans for providing homes, each with an acre of ground, for those of the lowest income group—farmhands. Many of these were found occupying shacks that had been cow barns, she said, without water or sanitary facilities and paying $5 to $10 a month. The building program is being planned on the basis of case work, she said.

Mrs. Herbert Coulton, incoming chairman of the league housing committee, told of Arlington Village. Mrs. Chester Williams is chairman of the department of economic welfare.

Trooper Hurt Saving Women From Md. Mob

Crowd Storms Jail, Seizes Pair Held In Farm Slaying

cells and dragged them through the window.

A. W. Brittingham, Pocomoke City police chief, reported one of three colored men accused in the slaying was seen by a posse in Dunn Swamp, 3 miles south of Pocomoke City, and was shot and wounded by Joe Hill, a posseman.

The suspect fled back into the swamp, but the two colored women with him, barefoot, cut and bruised from their flight through the marsh, surrendered.

Shortly afterward, Deputy Sheriff Crawford Hillman, of Pocomoke, announced arrest of another suspect on a Pocomoke City street.

State's Attorney William G. Kerbin, jr., directing the manhunt, said no formal charges had been filed against any of the three, but that all were being questioned.

Trail Leads to Swamp

State Police Lieut. Andrew Conner ordered an airplane, piloted by Fred Ennis, of Salisbury, into the search after the posse and officers had vainly scoured the woods between here and Pocomoke.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Pilchard, suffering from bullet wounds in the back, shock and exposure, was able to tell officers who questioned her in a Salisbury hospital that three colored men instead of two, broke into the Pilchard home Sunday night. She previously had reported two men responsible.

Shot in the Back

Her husband was shot down in the living room as the men entered. After taking Mrs. Pilchard's purse, they fired into her back as she fled upstairs and onto the roof of the home where she hid in terror until Monday morning.

O'Conor Reveals Order

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 13 (AP).—Governor O'Conor disclosed tonight that he had ordered 25 State policemen to the Eastern Shore late today when informed "a serious situation" was imminent.

He said State Police headquarters on the Eastern Shore reported they anticipated unrest.

He said Col. Beverly Ober of the State Police told him every precaution was being taken, and that sufficient State Policemen would be sent to "preserve quiet."

socialized element into the licensing of foster family homes and child-caring institutions.

The legislation is being drafted by a group in the child welfare division of the Council of Social Agencies, in the hope that it will come before Congress at this session.

But in the meantime—

A foster family home, which takes in children to board, may meet the physical requirements for getting a permit—and yet may be an unsuitable place because of social and emotional hazards.

Only a permit from the Health Department is required. Approximately 250 homes in the District have these permits at present.

An inspector from the Bureau of Sanitation checks up on a home applying for a permit and reports whether it has a suitable physical setup for taking care of children. The applications now come across the desk of Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of maternal and child welfare, Health Department, who has a check-up made by a social worker, although there are no legal requirements for it.

"Sometimes there is doubt in our mind about the desirability of a certain home—and yet we may not see enough there to refuse the permit, with the possibility of having to go to court on it. It is awfully hard in court to prove intangible things, which may, however, be a tremendously important factor in the suitability of a home for children," Dr. Oppenheimer said.

Tendency Toward Emotional Instability

For example, on her desk lay an application which met the requirements for physical setup of a foster home to care for five children. Yet the social worker found a tendency toward emotional instability in the foster mother, evidence of her inability to control the servants and the children, as well as indications of untruthfulness and bad faith on the part of both foster parents.

But the social worker reported that evidence was not such as to justify an outright refusal of a permit, as requirements now stand.

Another danger is in the foster family homes which have little other income "and want to take in children as a means of livelihood," it was pointed out by Miss Lucia Murchison, director of medical social service for the Health Department.

"Naturally in such homes, they spend as little as they can on the children's care. And when the children's parents are already paying as little as possible for keeping them there, of course there are only meager expenditures for the children's care," she said.

The "bootleg home" is another problem, Dr. Oppenheimer pointed out. These homes take in children to board, without applying for a permit until they are reported to authorities.

A Boarding School Menace

The "glaring example of a small boarding school which is a menace" was cited by Miss Terrett. It manages to meet requirements for physical facilities to get a permit, and it keeps a qualified teacher to conform with the educational requirements for running a school.

And yet the social set-up is such that "it is definitely a menace," Miss Terrett declared. Her own files on the school date back to 1931, with numerous reports of unwholesome conditions there and with requests for investigations by authorities to see if it should still be allowed to operate.

"Reports from there at intervals tell of sheets unchanged for weeks, an empty ice box, a cold atmosphere," Miss Terrett said.

In her files are other reports from observers that "the children are dirty and half-fed" and that the school is "just a parking place for children." Reports indicate that about a dozen children at a time are in school there.

"Although this is the only school here at this level of badness, so far as I know, it shows conditions which might develop more widely," said Miss Terrett.

"And there would be a terrific loophole in the proposed legislation if boarding schools were omitted, because a foster family home which couldn't meet the requirements of a stricter law could merely engage a superannuated teacher and call itself a boarding school, and get by," she pointed out.

Frank Stevenson, of Takoma Park, Md., graduate student of agriculture, refused to be perturbed. "I think they are all wet," he said, "but I believe they will dry out. Someone has said if you aren't a radical by the time you are 25, you don't have a head; and if you haven't lost your radical ideas after that, you haven't a brain.

"I refuse to take them seriously because I believe their bark is worse than their bite. They refused to condemn Russia and voted against aid to Finland. From the alarmist viewpoint, this looks pretty serious. But from the nonalarmist viewpoint, it's pretty sensible. In other words, they might just want to keep out of the whole European mess, and I believe that's the right idea."

Walter Neal, of Frostburg, Md., sophomore and member of the R. O. T. C. Corps, said he was in favor of youth congresses because they generally were opposed to war.

"I believe we should fight if this country were attacked, but most of this talk about the danger of an attack is propaganda," he said.

Ted Stell, of 1812 Varnum street northwest, another sophomore and member of the R. O. T. C., didn't believe the charges of communism against the Youth Congress. "But if they are true," he added, "I would be opposed to the Congress, because I'm not in favor of Communism."

Tempe Curry, of Bethesda, Md., and Bess Paterson, of Towson, Md., seniors, said the Congress was too radical and unrepresentative for them. Gunther A. Warner, of Baltimore County, a premed student, said he didn't like the communistic element.

Funeral Services To Be Held Today For Mrs. Collison

Funeral services for Mrs. Robert C. Collison, 91, of 1840 Mintwood place northwest, will be held at 4 p. m. today in the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Troy, N. Y.

Mrs. Collison, who lived here 40 years, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George F. Taylor, in Tryon, N. C., where she had been visiting since Christmas. She suffered a fractured hip in a fall a month ago.

She was an active member of the Covenant Church during her residence in Washington and served for 15 years as a director of the Presbyterian Home for the Aged. Mrs. Collison, the former Frances Phillips, was a native of Leflie, N. Y.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Taylor, are two other daughters, the Misses Jessie and Willa Collison, with whom Mrs. Collison made her home here.

Roosevelt Leaves Today for Cruise On Naval Vessel

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt will leave Washington today on what he called an annual trip, but his destination remained a mystery.

He is going to get on a Navy boat, he said at a press conference, but he did not know definitely yet at what port he would embark. The trip will last ten days.

There was general expecation around the White House that Mr. Roosevelt would journey southward toward warmer weather and try to get in some fishing as he has done in midwinter in previous years.

$500 in Silverware Stolen From Auto

More than $500 worth of silverware was stolen from his automobile parked at Fifteenth and M streets northwest, George Wilten, Chicago salesman, reported to police yesterday.

The thief broke through a ventilator window, Wilten said, and cleaned out the car.

Representative Martin F. Smith, of Washington, entertained a party in honor of Sheriff L. C. Huntamer, of Olympia, Wash., on Monday evening. Bill Strickland and his orchestra were delighted to play Western tunes for these notable guests.

RINGSIDE VIEWS. Shoreham Blue Room. Dr. Oscar Albertini, Cuban sugar king who makes a million dollars a day, more or less, appreciatively accepting a free cigarette holder from the Shoreham's new ciggie lass, Lola Manning . . . Juan J. Tomadelli, fresh from Palm Beach and tanned like an Indian.

Billie Bailey and "Ha-Cha" Gardner singing a ha-cha ballad at the Mayflower Lounge

Shar-Zad. Ted Crosby, brother of Bing and Bob, enjoying the hilarious conga dancing which got clear off the floor and wound in and out among the tables. . . . Singer Kay Hoyt looking very serious and nobly turning down all offers of candy and ciggies, her Lenten sacrifice.

Hi Hat. Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida apparently bending an appreciative ear to "Chapanecas," the old Mexican song that Opalee and the International Trio do so spiritedly.

WEDDING BELLS. Linette (Nat) McCann, pretty young publicitress who kept the Pall Mall Room in the limelight last season before she joined the staff of Click, has just become engaged. The happy lad is Earl Burton, of the Farm Credit Administration.

DOCTOR ADELITA. Singer Adelita, of the Madrillon, tells us that a kerosene gargle is wonderful for a sore throat! "But you'd better not smoke a cigarette right afterward," she cautioned. We bet not! Juanito, of La Salle Versailles, took Adelita's kerosene prescription last week. She thinks he's getting along all right. Anyway, she hasn't seen him since.

THESE NIGHTINGALES. Rainbow Room. Lew Berman has at last found a successor to that "W. Va. Hills" ditty. It's "She Had to Go and Lose It at the Astor," now a nightly customer "must."

Cafe Caprice. Eddie Mayhoff has a couple of new midnight pepper items. They're "Let Nature Take Its Course" and "Who Was My Loce?"

Robin Hood. Why bother about opera when Dean Carroll can sing all the lovely Gilbert and Sullivan tunes. She used to be with the San Carlos Opera.

King Cole Room. Lynne Allison is that marvelous treat nowadays—a singer who doesn't bother with a mike. Her "La Paloma" is a beauty.

Fat Boy. De Vaughn Clements, smart leader of the Fat Boy band, was the first orchestra leader in this territory to introduce a straight "jam session" on the radio.

Ihlder Calls For 20,000 Slum Homes

Number Necessary For Complete Job, A. D. A. Chief Tells Kalorama Citizens

Homes for 20,000 families must be built in the District by the Alley Dwelling Authority to "do a complete job" in slum reclamation, John Ihlder, ADA administrator, declared last night at a meeting of the Kalorama Citizens Association.

Construction of the 20,000 dwelling units is the "ultimate" goal of the authority in replacement of substandard by up-to-date sanitary housing here, Ihlder asserted. The replacement is necessary throughout the city, he said. At present 3,000 units are under construction.

The replacement becomes necessary as districts are "blighted" because of two factors—overcrowding and automobile traffic.

Advocates City Planning

Ihlder advocated city planning with arteries routed away from residential districts to halt depreciation from traffic.

"A city is a growing organism which develops and decays at the same time," he stated, and the "decay must be halted by government "facilitation" of private construction and participation in development of housing such as is being carried on by the ADA.

He described at length the Alley Dwelling program by means of which sub-standard areas are acquired by the Government through purchase or condemnation and modern homes constructed on a self-liquidating basis.

Logan-Thomas Circle

A resolution calling for a comprehensive survey of liquor distribution in the District was adopted last night by the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association.

The resolution, introduced in behalf of the civic affairs committee of the Federation of Churches, charges that too many liquor stores have been licensed in the District, that many are operated in places frequented by children and that numerous licenses have been granted in residential districts.

"The Nation's Capital," the resolution declares, "should have a system of liquor distribution that would set an example for the rest of the Nation."

A recent resolution of the Federation of Citizens Associations, urging that new apartment houses and public buildings be compelled to provide garage space for all patrons, was opposed by the Logan-Thomas Circle group as "too drastic."

Stanton Park

Sidewalks which "hold water instead of letting it drain off" were scored at a meeting of the Stanton Park Citizens Association.

Mrs. F. F. Menkhaus, author of the resolution, declared the sidewalks had failed to drain adequately since their construction by the WPA last year. With the recent snows they became impassable, it was said.

Members also voted to request Congress to "keep its hands off" District administrative boards. William J. Bartle, who offered the resolution, said he did so because of the recent request for an investigation of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board. The request was motivated by politics, he asserted.

In other business, citizens asked appropriations for instruction of crippled children be continued, and criticized snow parking signs as "useless."

Summit Park Citizens

The Summit Park Citizens Association resolved that appropriations for a new elementary school in North Randle Highlands should be reinserted in the District budget for 1941.

The group has long sought replacement of the portable school which, it has been charged, is ill-heated, badly in need of paint, and unsanitary. The children of the section recently called it to Mrs. Roosevelt's attention. The motion was offered by William J. Smith.

The association also asked the District to clean the sewer outlets into the Anacostia River and refurbish the seawalls.

Resurfacing of several alleys also was sought.

Connecticut Ave. Ass'n.

The Connecticut Avenue Association last night elected L. R. Colburn president at a meeting held in the Mayflower. Other new officers are Forrest Oakley, first vice president; Alice Fay, second vice president; Arthur Tilley, secretary; and Luther Schreiner, treasurer.

The board of directors includes Leroy Thayer, Lew S. Birns, Julius Lulley, James Styles, Emile Beauvais, Ethyl Fistere, Richard Norris, B. Houston McCeney, Laurence Rubel and L. E. Massey, ex-officio.

'I Was Robbed,' Pugilist Laments; Fans Will Agree

"I was robbed," Al Gilbert, 22-year-old prize fighter, complained to Second Precinct police early yesterday. And investigation disclosed he had been, not of a decision, but of $5.

Gilbert said he was riding in a taxicab with Joseph E. Jackson, 47, of 904 Thirteenth street northeast, when the driver stopped and two colored men jumped in. A fight started and Gilbert was robbed of $5 and Jackson his $70 watch.

Both victims were taken to Garfield Hospital. Gilbert was bitten in the head and Jackson suffered face cuts and bruises.

Work Begun on Education Unit At Mt. Vernon Place Church

Ceremony Held as Wrecking Company Clears Ground for $125,000 Structure For Sunday School, Recreation Rooms

Bricks, dust and plaster flew yesterday afternoon at Ninth and Massachusetts avenue northwest, as wrecking crews began clearing ground for Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church's $125,000 educational building.

Razing of the first dwelling at 908 Massachusetts avenue started after a brief ceremony on the north steps of the church.

A. E. Martin, chairman of the building committee, expressed regret that preaching engagements in Florida made it impossible for Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor, to attend the exercises. Martin said he thought the building progress "is due more to his indomitable leadership than to any other factor."

Dr. Clifton P. Clark, chairman of the needs unit of the building committee, spoke briefly.

Judge Eugene Black, chairman of the finance unit, pointed out that $30,000 in cash has been received toward the $80,000 pledged in a congregational drive initiated a short time ago.

The Rev. Purcell Storey, assistant pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, presided.

The main entrance of the new building will be on K street where three other congregation-owned dwellings are being razed. Another entrance will be on Massachusetts avenue. The front of the church faces on Ninth street.

The new unit will contain class and assembly rooms for a completely departmentalized church school with an enrollment of 1,800; a recreation hall, banquet and social hall, a kitchen, dramatics hall with stage and dressing rooms, choir and music director's rooms.

Other members of the building committee are Mrs. Ida R. Groover, A. F. Harlan and B. C. Palmer, the needs unit; Earl Carson, Henry G. Thomas, Justice Bolitha J. Laws, W. D. Johnson and J. W. Rodkey, finance, and Talma L. Smith, R. C. Smith, B. S. Embry, Walter A. Graham and Paul H. McMurray, plans.

Randolph Asks For Answer On Seal Plan

Commissioners Reminded of Note On Citizens Council

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday addressed a letter to the Commissioners asking why they had not replied to his suggestion that the citizens advisory council proposed in the Seal reorganization plan be elective.

The District heads expect to transmit the measure, together with minor revisions recommended by the Budget Bureau, to the District Committee next Monday.

It is understood the delay is due to the absence from the city of Commissioner Hazen, who is vacationing in Florida. However, Commissioner Allen, who is also out of the city, will return Friday or Saturday and will send the plan to the committee.

Randolph pointed out, in a letter to Commissioner Hazen, that his original recommendation had been made January 29. Besides proposing that the council be elective, he suggested that it should report to the House and Senate District Committees as well as to the Commissioners.

"It is now more than two weeks since you received this communication," he wrote, "and I trust that you have been able during this period to carefully consider this highly important matter."

Randolph also conferred informally with Chairman Summers, of the House Judiciary Committee, regarding the local suffrage and National representation resolutions pending in his committee.

Week Proclaimed

In commemoration of the entrance of the Rainbow Division into the first World War, the Commissioners yesterday proclaimed the period from February 18 through February 24 as Rainbow Division Veterans' Week.

Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee Named Attache In Venezuela

Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee, a naval flier, yesterday was named as the new naval and air attache to Caracas, Venezuela.

LEE

A direct descendant of Gen. "Light-Horse Harry" Lee, of Revolutionary War fame, Lieut. Lee is the son of an Army officer and the grandson of Maj. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. He is a great grandnephew of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Detached last month from the aircraft carrier Yorktown, Lieut. Lee will have temporary duty in the office of Naval Intelligence before leaving for Caracas. He was born in the Philippines in 1905 and graduated from the Naval Academy in 1926. From 1931 to 1933, Lee was a White House aide. His home is at Owings Mills, Md.

Fireboat to Joust With 15-Inch Ice Above Key Bridge

Termed by experts as "too old" and "inadequate" that valiant little boat "Firefighter" today may begin an historic trip up the Potomac above Key Bridge whence never before it plied.

Firefighter will sally forth to conquer 15 inches of ice—if Fire Chief Stephen Porter can find a pilot who knows the ins and outs of this unchartered portion of the Potomac.

Flooded with requests to break the ice now and thus prevent possible damage when the thaw comes, Porter's first thought was blasting with dynamite. He asked the War Department. They said they would if the District would bear the expense. So Porter decided to use the Firefighter.

New Head Of Bar Urges D.C. Suffrage

F. W. Hill, Jr., In Initial Address, Also Asks Faster Court Procedure

In his initial address as president of the District Bar Association, Francis W. Hill, jr., called for a program seeking suffrage here, modernization of corporation laws and speeding up of court procedure.

Pointing out that he in the past had felt "lukewarm" about the matter of District suffrage, he declared:

"If it is necessary to have representation in Congress in order to have a local man appointed to our bench, if it is necessary to have representation in Congress in order to have our corporation law modernized, then, in Heaven's name, let's support the movement for suffrage."

Hill urged continuation of association efforts to get District Attorney David A. Pine appointed to the vacancy in the District Court bench.

Five Resolutions Adopted

Earlier, acting on six recommendations of an American Bar Association committee, offered by Herbert M. Bingham, chairman of the local committee on jurisprudence and law reform, the attorneys adopted five and referred one to committee for further study.

Adopted were the following resolutions which in principle approved.

Establishment of a system of public defenders in Federal courts. (A bill creating a public defender, approved by the Bar Association, is pending in the Senate.)

Provisions for voluntary retirement of Federal judges disabled before reaching retirement age.

An act permitting the United States Government to be sued in respect to property damage or personal injury due to negligence of Government officers or employes.

A law allowing a person accused of a crime against the Federal Government to waive indictment proceedings by grand jury and to consent to prosecution by information.

A statute extending the Criminal Appeals Act to permit the United States to appeal from any order sustaining a demurrer or like pleading.

Firearms Proposal Recommitted

Recommendation for an act bringing pistols and revolvers within the scope of the National Firearms Act, through registration of all weapons and a nominal tax on their transfer, was recommitted to committee.

President Hill took a firm stand in opposition to pre-legal college requisites, saying they were "undemocratic and unfair." He asked the association to consider the tendency of ever increasing educational requirements for admission to the bar.

The Bar Association head charged that many of the District laws were outmoded, and that the Capital's corporation law was so antiquated that approximately 19,800 corporations pay more than $1,000,000 annually by way of franchise tax and resident agent's fees, "none of which is received by the District government."

Citing statistics collected by the association's committee on corporation law, Hill said:

"If our corporation law were modernized, this entire sum could be collected by the District without taking one additional penny from those here engaged in business. Taxes could be lowered by the sum of $1,000,000, or needed empprovements could be made without any additional burden.

"We must work and solicit others to work with us to obtain a modern corporation law."

In a discussion of bar and bench relations Hill asserted that the District court docket was congested. "The delay in obtaining a trial works a hardship and an injustice," he said. "In some cases, it is justice denied.

"We, the bench and the bar, should approach the problem of making the work of our court current. We should study this problem in an endeavor to ascertain the cause of delays."

Hill announced he would appoint a committee on relations with the District Court to investigate the problems and see what can be done about speeding up the hearing of cases.

Richard L. Merrick, chairman of the committee on suppression of unauthorized practice of law, reported on action of his unit, warning the lawyers "we must first fumigate our new domocile." Dr. James A. Pike, of George Washington University, discussed recent cases under the new Federal rules.

Coleman Jennings, 'Outstanding D. C. Citizen' Of 1939, Is Reelected President of Chest

Officers of the Community Chest for 1940 named last night at meeting in U. S. Chamber of Commerce

Coleman Jennings was reelected president of the board of trustees of the Community Chest at a meeting last night in the United States Chamber of Commerce building. Jennings recently was awarded the Cosmopolitan Club's distinguished service medal as the District's outstanding citizen of 1939.

In his speech of acceptance Jennings stressed the vital importance of volunteer service in the annual Chest campaign.

"There is much work for us to do and I am counting upon the cooperation of every one of you," he told the 100 members of the board who attended the business meeting.

Alvin W. Hall was elected first vice president of the Chest; Thomas P. Morgan, jr., second vice president; Morris Cafritz, third vice president; Mrs. Wilson Lee, fourth vice president, and John F. Victory, secretary.

Mrs. Frederick Altemus, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling and Richard H. Wilmer were elected to serve as members of the elective committee for a two-year term.

The chest's work is better understood by the public today than at any time in the organization's history, Earl Nash, chairman of the public relations committee, reported.

He expressed gratitude for "wholehearted co-operation from newspapers, radio, speakers and civic groups."

Rep. Gibbs Says Only Church Can Make Democracy Safe

Former Sunday School Superintendent Tells Men's Brotherhood of Albright Evangelical It Can Supply Leadership in That Mission

The Church—and on communism, fascism or naziism—is the only organization that can make the world safe for democracy, Representative Gibbs, of Georgia, declared last night.

He told the Men's Brotherhood of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church that such groups as it could help lead in "that mission," and that the world needed to return to the "old-time religion, the kind your daddy and mine had."

Third legislator-former Sunday school superintendent to address the men this year, Gibbs said the world has lost much of its faith because "it is traveling at such a terrific rate of speed."

"The people have been going so fast they haven't had time to see where they're going in the world," he went on, warning that "we're overlooking the fundamentals that mold the character of our boys and girls."

Drawing on personal experience as judge and prosecuting attorney, he said, only 1 in 50 youngsters haled before him for crime had had any Sunday school or church affiliation.

Christian churchmen have a great responsibility in seeing that all children, their own or others, are under the church's influence, he said.

The speaker declared he never would vote for America to enter a foreign war but added that "if Hitler or his gang come near our shores, I'll get out my old Winchester."

Gibbs was introduced by Michael Bunker, House Republican cloakroom clerk.

George A. Corbin, brotherhood president and former president of the Manor Park Citizens Association, presided, and the Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor of the church, spoke briefly. The girls' chancel choir and G. Mallet Provost presented musical numbers.

Capital News in Brief

Garden Fund Urged

Restoration of a $2,400 cut in the appropriation for District school gardens will be urged upon the House Appropriations Committee as a traffic safety measure, George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, announced yesterday.

"We fully realize the value of these gardens in keeping youngsters off the streets during the spring and summer," Keneipp said. The Board of Education requested $4,800 for the gardens. The Commissioners and Budget Bureau cut the item to $2,400.

Police Vs. Police

Twelfth Precinct police Monday night were twice summoned to investigate two of their own number, carrying on investigations of their own.

Noticing an open window in the Sears, Roebuck & Co. warehouse at 2301 Lawrence street northeast, a patrolman climbed in to search for the "burglar." Once inside he accidentally set off a burglar alarm which sent out a further call for police.

In another instance, a woman at 160 U street northeast looked out of a window and saw a dark figure "acting suspiciously" in the alley. She phoned the station. Officers found a fellow-policeman on a routine check.

Gas Overcomes Wife

Charles E. King, 71-year-old bricklayer, of 351 Eleventh street southeast, returned from work yesterday to find his invalid wife, Sophie, 63, overcome by gas.

King found a heater connection leaking, opened all the windows and called the Casualty Hospital ambulance.

Last night Mrs. King, who had responded to resuscitation treatment, was resting at home, her condition fair.

King told police his wife has suffered a prolonged illness, and that he had not gone to work Monday in order to be with her.

Holy Cross Benefit

Sylvia Meyer, harpist with the National Symphony Orchestra, will play a benefit recital March 26 for the Alumni Association of Holy Cross Academy, Mrs. Hilda Ruppert, president of the association, announced last night after a meeting of the organization. Proceeds will go to the alumni scholarship fund.

Mrs. Ruppert will be general chairman for the affair. Other committee heads will be Mrs. Charles Fierst and Miss Regina Hartnett; patronesses; Miss Mary Virginia Burke, program; Mrs. Clark Kline, tickets; Mrs. Fred Rice, publicity.

Autopsy Planned

An autopsy will be held today in the death of Robert L. Morrison, 31-year-old cab driver, whose body was discovered yesterday in his room at the Franklin Park Hotel, 1322 I street northwest.

Police found letters in Morrison's room addressed to his wife, who is in Lynn, Mass. He had been living at the hotel for a month.

Peppino Mangravite, muralist and art instructor at Cooper Union in New York City, will give a lecture on "Modern Trends in American Art" in the Corcoran School of Art auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight.

Cleric Urges Closer Contact With God

Rev. Irving Ketchum Talks at Lenten Rite In Penn Theater

The value of a "spiritual handshake," of personal contact with God, was stressed in a Lenten sermon here yesterday by the Rev. Irving Ketchum, pastor-in-charge of the Vienna (Va.) Presbyterian Church.

He told a large audience at noonday Lenten rites of Southeast Protestant churches that he had shaken hands with six Presidents of the United States and other dignitaries, and derived much pleasure from the contacts, but assured that "nothing could surpass a 'spiritual handshake'—closer communion with God."

The clergyman spoke at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, where Dr. Gove G. Johnson, pastor of National Baptist Memorial Church, will be today's speaker. Services begin at 12:05 noon. Christ Episcopal Church, Navy Yard, is conducting this week's programs.

The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, will address services today at 4:45 p. m. at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G street northwest, under the auspices of the Washington Federation of Churches. The Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills, pastor of Our Saviour Episcopal Church, Brookland, and chairman of the public meetings committee of the federation, will preside. The Right Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, Bishop of West Virginia, is preaching daily at noon this week at Epiphany Church.

Continuing his series of Lenten messages, Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski will preach tonight at 8 o'clock at Grace Lutheran Church on "Men Who Still Build Crosses for Crucifixions." The junior choir will sing.

21,000 Tag Applications Held Up Here

Warrants Issued Against 6,000 Drivers Who Ignored Violation Notices

Nearly 6,000 warrants are on file at the Traffic Division for motorists who failed to heed traffic violation notices in the last 12 months, The Post learned last night.

Police are holding the warrants against offenders' 1940 automobile license plate applications, which were mailed Monday to car owners with clear traffic records.

Besides the applications held up by warrants, it also was learned that nearly 15,000 others are held up because the automobiles have not been inspected. J. Earl Steinhauer, director of District inspection stations, said, however, this number is being reduced daily.

Police Obtain Satisfaction

Under the system of holding up registration applications, police are able to obtain satisfaction for the thousands of tickets which are ignored by motorists every year, it was pointed out.

The "payup or no tag" system was adopted several years ago.

Several major taxicab companies will be without tags, it was learned, if they do not pay tickets which were placed on certain cars. It was explained that in the event a warrant is obtained for one vehicle of a corporation, it automatically holds up all other applications of the company.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer ordered the applicants of uninspected cars to be held up. He said that under the compulsory inspection law, it was necessary that every vehicle registered be inspected before tags are issued.

Tag applications were placed in the mail Monday and all applications will be in the hands of applicants by February 26, Van Duzer said. He warned motorists that if they do not receive an application by that time inquiry should be made as there may be either a warrant or inspection notices against them.

Tag Sales to Begin February 26

Mail service of tags will begin February 15 and over-the-counter sales will begin February 26. Tags may be placed on cars March 1, Van Duzer announced.

Although pedestrian control laws in Washington have succeeded in reducing accidents involving walkers, there still is a need for better enforcement by police and better observance of the rules by motorists, according to an article by Van Duzer in this month's issue of Public Safety, National Safety Council publication.

He pointed out that pedestrian injuries have decreased 6.6 per cent in the entire city since control laws were adopted. Most effective application of the walking rules is in the downtown congested area where mishaps have dropped 12.8 per cent.

Tech Knocked Out of Interhigh Title Race

Anacostia Defeats Maroon Five, 46-39; Western Bows, 34-22

Eastern Turns Back Red Raiders; Five Teams in Running for Championship As Result of Two Games Yesterday

Tech High's Mighty Midgets, finalists in last year's interhigh basketball round robin, bowed out of this year's race yesterday at Anacostia where the Indians took their first victory of the series, 46-39. In the other half of the two-gym doubleheader, Eastern's champions trounced Western, 34-22, with a spree in the opening minutes of the game.

The twin results left five teams in competition for the four berths available in the title tournament—Roosevelt, Wilson, Central, Eastern and Western.

Tech Is Beaten

Johnny (Jeep) Placos, Anacostia guard, set a 1939-40 interhigh scoring record with 20 points as he led his Indians to their usual upset of the manuel trainers.

Oddly enough, Placos was hard-pressed for individual scoring honors, as Jake Walsh, little Tech guard, found little difficulty ringing up 13 points.

A small gathering of 300 spectators found their way to Anacostia's bandbox gym to watch Tech's midget five fight for a play-off berth. Anacostia, without victory until yesterday, was already eliminated.

By all odds the most serious barrier to a Tech victory was Anacostia's tightly knit zone defense. The Maroon team found extreme difficulty in penetrating the zone for close-up shots and consequently was forced to employ long set shots which proved unsuccessful.

Anacostia jumped to an early lead and was never headed. Tech drew up to 35-32 with but six minutes of play remaining, but here Elmer Leukhardt thrust his 6-foot frame into the proceedings and quickly dropped in a brace of two-pointers to place the game beyond the Trainers' reach.

With the diminutive Placos leading the way, Anacostia used a one-handed pivot shot as its scoring medium. Ninety per cent of the Indians' scoring was essayed from the center lane, as they took advantage of the Tech's team's lack of height.

Anacostia boosted its advantage to 21-18 at halftime as Placos reached new heights of glory.

Raiders Stopped

One-and-a-half periods of indifferent play, while Eastern was enjoying one of its hottest hands of the season, accounted for Western's third loss against two triumphs. The Raiders were never in the game, and only because they were out-scored, out-fought and outsmarted during most of the first half.

Joe Essex, spindley center, started the defending champions toward the victory that tied the Raiders for fourth place in the standings when he took a floor-length pass from Moe Shulman and dropped the ball through. In quick succession Warren Earhardt, Bob Custer and Essex again hit the cords and Eastern was ahead, 8-3, as the first period gun sounded.

Western Scores

It took Western five minutes of futile scurrying around in the second session to ring up its first points, during which time Eastern had ripped the net for 11 points on shots from directly under the basket. With the count 19-3, Jake Hilleary finally rammed in a long shot and Western managed to hold its foe fairly even from there in.

At the half the count was 25-9, a a low scoring third period left the count 28-13, and throughout the final quarter the teams alternated at scoring.

At the foul line Eastern was as consistent as it was from the field. Until the final period it made good on every shot allowed it, Earhardt getting five straight single-pointers. In all, the Tide made good on 8 out of 13 tries. Western sank 6 out of 11.

That the Tide was passing the ball well was indicated by the division of points. George Adriani and Custer had eight each and Essex and Earhardt tallied seven apiece. Western's high man was Irvin Schenker, with 6 points, though Jimmy Karas and Hop Perrell accounted for five each.

Whitehead Adds 66, Now 10 Under Par

By the Associated Press

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 13.—Ten strokes under par for the 32 holes he has played so far in the annual Golf Club Champions Tournament, Charles Whitehead, New Jersey amateur titleholder, loomed today as the man to beat for the 1940 crown.

Whitehead's subpar 66, in the qualifying round yesterday, set a competitive amateur course record.

Today he knocked four more strokes off par in eliminating Beau Melik, Racine, Wis., in the opening round of match play, 5 and 4. Whitehead shot the front nine in 33, four strokes under par, to card a 3-up lead. He won the first three holes after the turn to have his opponent 6 down. Melik rallied with a birdie on the thirteenth, to win his lone hole of the match, and the battle ended when the next green was halved.

Bill Bill Stark, Florida's amateur titleholder; Frank Strafaci, ranking metropolitan champion from New York, and Bobby Dunkelberger the defending tournament champion from High Point, N. C., also survived.

13 Boats Off On 184-Mile Ocean Race

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13.—Robert W. Johnson's trimly rigged yawl, Good News, from the New York Yacht Club, led 12 other sailing craft across the starting line today in the sixth renewal of the 184-mile Miami to Nassau ocean yacht race.

The Princton (N. J.) manufacturer shot his new 64-foot jib-headed craft across the line 15 seconds after the gun to emphasize his boast that he was out to give the field a trimming.

With the aid of a favoring 8.5-mile southwest wind, Good News veered off on a fast starboard tack, followed 10 seconds later by the 63-foot yawl Elizabeth McCaw, owned by R. J. Reynolds, of Sea Island, Ga.

Third across the line, another 10 seconds back, was the 72-foot scratch boat, Tioga, a jib-headed ketch entered by Harry E. Noyes, of Marblehead, Mass.

The 54-foot yawl Stormy Weather, winner of the Nassau race for the past three years, was a poor tenth. Skipper William La Brot, of Annapolis, Md., appeared to have taken too long a start.

Ramsay, Assisted by Courteau, Scores Eagles' Third Goal

Les Ramsay, Washington center (No. 12), is shown scoring the goal that gave the Eagles a 3-1 lead over the New York Rovers in second period of match at Riverside Stadium last night. Ramsay was assisted on the play by Paul Courteau, seen at extreme right (No. 8). Player on ice is Goalie Harry Braithwaite, of Rovers. Eagles Rout Rovers, 7-4; Covert Stars

By Jack Munhall.

The Washington Eagles kindled their hopes of winning the Eastern Amateur hockey title last night by crushing the pace-setting New York Rovers, 7 to 4, at Riverside Stadium, for their third straight victory.

The Eagles' triumph was a personal one for Center Roy Covert, who established an individual scoring record for the local season by pushing four goals through Goalie Harry Braithwaite in a sensational performance. Sharing honors with Covert were Les Ramsey, also a Covert were Les Ramsay, also a little wing.

Ramsay checked in with a pair of goals and an assist, while Courteau was credited with one goal and two assists. Though this trio accounted for all the Washington points, there were other heroes in the Eagles' impressive victory, which, incidentally, was the third loss in succession for the slipping New York sextet.

Cairns Impressive

Freshman Goalie Les Colvin practically insured himself of a regular position by his polished, air-tight play about the nets. In the last five minutes of the game Colvin was turning back the attack of five wings, for the Rovers withdrew their defenses in a desperate effort to tie the score. Bill Cairns, burly wing, returning to the lineup to supplant the injured Hal Dewey after missing several matches in a "disciplinary" move by Coach Mackenzie, was a tornado of action.

Immeasurably improved over any time this campaign, Cairns distinguished himself by his accurate passing and defense tactics. When not rushing the puck for the Eagles, he was stealing it from the Rovers who were no match for the aroused Eagles last night.

New York, now only 1 point ahead of the menacing second-place Baltimore Orioles and 7 in front of Washington, fell behind at the start and never were able to catch up. Their lone threatening ges-

Brown Is Suspended By D. C. Commission

Natie Draws 60-Day Lay-Off for 'Persistent Foul Tactics;' Fighter Warned Repeatedly to Keep Blows Up

By Al Hailey

The District Boxing Commission went into action yesterday on the strange case of Fighter Natie Brown and unanimously voted a 60-day suspension of the Washington heavyweight comeback campaigner "for persistent foul tactics in spite of repeated warnings."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman of the commission, announced the decision last night after a late session with Commissioners Claude W. Owen, Fred Buckholtz and Secretary Harvey L. Miller.

"The commission desires to forcefully discourage the use of foul blows and this suspension has that objective in view," the decision stated.

Brown, who lost his first comeback appearance two weeks ago in Turner's Arena to Mickey McAvoy on a third-round foul blow, was "given another chance" by the District boxing body on the understanding that he was to meet McAvoy in a return match.

McAvoy was pulled out of the scheduled return at the last minute and Sandy McDonald, a Dallas, Tex., importation, substituted just last Monday night. Again the question of Natie's foul tactics took a large part in the show, and Sandy went down in the sixth round claiming he had been fouled—a charge which commission physicians refused to allow, however.

"The commission had specifically warned Brown prior to the McDonald contest that he must keep his body punches up and that the use of foul blows would surely result in disciplinary action," the ruling stated.

'Moon' Mullins To Coach At St. Ambrose

By the Associated Press

Davenport, Iowa, Feb. 13.—Larry (Moon) Mullins, head coach at Loyola University of New Orleans, will succeed W. J. (Dukes) Duford as football coach at St. Ambrose College here, the Rev. Thomas Lawlor, chairman of the athletic board announced today.

The appointment of Mullins, a former Notre Dame fullback, followed a week-end conference in Chicago after about 50 applicants had been considered by the board.

Contracts for Mullins and his assistants, who will be named later, are for an indefinite period. He will devote his time to football and track, leaving basketball to an assistant.

Mullins' contract at Loyola expires March 1, and it is expected he will report for duty here March 15, when Duford and his assistants, Bob Klenck and Don Geyer, will leave for St. Louis University.

Loyola discontinued football at the end of the 1939 season.

St. John's, Gonzaga Fives Meet Today

Prepping for their second meeting of the season on George Washington's Birthday, St. John's and Gonzaga go into action today to highlight the local scholastic card.

The Johnnies, fresh from an upset over Roosevelt, the interhigh leader, square off with Wilson at the latter's gym at 3:30, and Gonzaga meets George Washington High at the Alexandria court at the same time. The latter clash was postponed from last night.

Eastern and Roosevelt, interhigh teams which won engagements yesterday, move against Episcopal and Maryland U. Freshmen, respectively, both games on the out-of-town floors and at 3:30. Landon and Georgetown Prep clash in the finale at Garrett Park.

Three Boxing Matches Head Week-End Card

The University of Maryland's annual All-University Night program Saturday features the week-end collegiate sports schedule which includes a pair of basketball games and three boxing matches.

The Terrapins meet Catholic University on the court at 7:30 and Western Maryland in the ring sometime later. In between there will be a colorful display of extra-curricular and intra-mural activities of the university.

On the same evening Columbus University's boxing team will seek its second victory of the season in a match with Tennessee at Turner's Arena, George Washington's crack basketball squad invades West Virginia and C. U.'s mitten slingers play host to Lock Haven (Pa.) Teachers.

Important Terp Games

Until Saturday the local card is light. However, the intracity basketball meeting between American and Georgetown tomorrow night at Tech gym and Maryland's invasion of Washington College at Chestertown, Md., promises spirited action.

The next few days will be important ones for the Maryland courtmen who face games with George Washington and V. M. I. On the contest with the Colonials will rest Maryland's hopes for the District championship while the result of their engagement with V. M. I. probably will decide whether they qualify for the Southern Conference championship tournament. The Terps have a record of six victories and five defeats within the confernece and are expected to need another triumph to be among the teams eligible to compete for the title in the tourney opening at Raleigh, February 29.

Byham Carries Burden

Little Reds Auerbach, consistent playing guard, continues to lead his George Washington basketball mates in scoring, latest figures reveal. Auerbach, after losing his lead to sophomore Matt Zunic in the Toledo game, bounced back to ring up 17 against Wayne and now is six points ahead of his persistent rival.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(During Shirley Povich's vacation his column is being written by other members of the sports staff.)

By Anne Hagner

In view of the loud dissension that followed The Post's series of pictures not long ago showing Gene Autry in the process of mounting a horse, we think it only fair to publish an accurate description of how this feat should really be done. However, we assume no responsibility for the safety of those who insist upon trying it on anything more lively than a piano.

Anne Hagner

The important thing is to be on friendly terms with your would-be mount. When he (and for the purpose of brevity, he will hereinafter be known as Hercules) first emerges from his stall, be careful not to make any insulting remarks about spavins, bowed tendons, or spare ribs, for this sort of thing will immediately put Hercules on the defensive side and he will resent your attempts to ride him.

The wisest thing to say is: "Jove, what withers!" in an admiring tone that will make Hercules think that you are a fine, upstanding fellow and an excellent judge of horseflesh. You are safe in commenting on his withers, for even a horse of Hercules' doubtful caliber is sure to possess them. As a matter of fact, it's one of the few things you can count on about a horse.

The next item for consideration is the approach. Be brisk and firm; do not let Hercules know that you are trembling in your boots, for it will give him a superiority complex that is to be feared in even the most docile horse. Walk up and present him with a carrot or a piece of sugar, that will convince him that you feel sympathetic toward him in spite of your intentions of using him for a beast of burden. This little kindness will show him that the world isn't such a bad place, after all, and he will feel quite kindly disposed toward you. If he looks as if he has not had a square meal in several weeks, however, be careful to keep your hand away from his mouth, as he may be extra hungry.

Now you are ready for the actual climb. Perhaps it would be wisest to test the elasticity of your riding attire by a few trial flights in the privacy of the home before venturing forth, even as the handsomest breeches have been known to fail in the hour of need.

At any rate, call together the available stablehands and bribe them to anchor Hercules on all sides so that he will be standing where you expect him to be when you are in midair. This is particularly important, for nothing is quite as embarrassing as planning to meet the saddle at a spot which you have mentally stipulated as "X" and find that the horse has pivoted to another spot which might correspond to "Y" on a geometric plan, but is definitely not in your scheme of things.

Having distributed some of the currency of the realm to the hired help to guarantee their assistance, you advance to Hercules' left side and take out your pocket compass (which will also be useful later in navigating the bridle paths of Rock Creek Park . . . if you get that far). If Hercules is facing north, you face south; if he is eyeing the western horizon you look east (see how easy it is?) You gather the reins in your left hand and make a few feeble jabs at the stirrup with your left foot, but you discover that the stable boys have arranged Hercules so that he is standing uphill. You remedy this by switching him around for 10 or 12 minutes until he is downhill, which will greatly expedite your ascent. At this point, the stable goat comes charging around the corner of the barn and gets poor old Hercules a trifle nervous, but you yourself must maintain an attitude of absolute calm in the face of chaos.

Now the heftiest member of the crowd decides that you will never get anywhere that way and he suggests that what you need is a "leg up." You say that this is a fine idea, so you put your hands on the saddle, pick up your left foot, and say: "Up when I count three!"

The chap gets confused here, for horsemen are rarely required to count above two, and you make a hearty lunge at "three" when he is waiting for "four." Hercules is petulant and gets disorganized again, but this is the part that is good for your character; it is a great builder of patience, to coin a phrase. This does the situation practically no good whatsoever and leaves you draped unattractively over the saddle.

You get a bit discouraged with the inefficiency of your supposed helpers, so you eye them scathingly and lead Hercules to a nearby stump, which you climb upon with ease. However, Hercules is adamant about this and refuses to have anything to do with stumps, on the grounds that a stump is one thing you can't trust. There you are, holding the ends of the reins and making cooing sounds at Hercules, and there Hercules is, three feet away from you, eyes blazing, nostrils wide with fear of this soul-stirring stump. You are aware of a few chuckles in the offing and you and Hercules desert the stump in a huff.

Finally your eye catches the derrick that has hitherto been used to carry hay into the loft above the barn. You attach yourself to this and the stable boys gratefully lower you into the saddle, thankful that at last you are aboard. If you do not find that these suggestions suit your own particular case, Gene Autry is the lad for you to consult. Personally, we're exhausted.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 13.—We went to the dogs tonight and, as usual, saw most of our friends. It was the sixty-fourth annual Westminster Kennel Club Show at Madison Square Garden. And, as customary, we saw Max Schmeling (in the saturnine stare of a boxer), Bill Tilden (in the streamlined face of a Borzois), Mickey Walker (in a sprightly Boston bull), Bob Fitzsimmons (in a Dalmatian), Tony Galento (in a wheezing English bull), Joe Louis (in a moody chow) and an Afghan hound who must have been my full brother.

CONSIDINE

The dogs may object, for they are a hoity-toity bunch who breakfast on sherry, eggs and milk, but you can spot all your acquaintances and more than one public figure on the faces of those fancy mutts in their stalls. And it is always astonishing to us how much some of the owners get to look like their dogs, too.

Dogs are among the many commodities the war has affected. An effort is being made at the Garden Show, and will be made during all United States dog shows this year, to keep the public from sneering at Dachshunds, German shepherds and Russian wolfhounds, now named Borzois. The political cartoonists on the Allies' side of the last war all but put the Dachshund out of business. They made the inoffensive piece of quadruped baloney the symbol of Prussianism, and most of them put a spiked steel helmet on him.

There are more foreign dogs in the big pooch convention this year. For the last few years the Americans were getting away from the foreign importations, so much so that even the names of the bone-polishers were getting to be pronounceable. But now the foreign-bred dogs are back in vogue and everybody around the show is pretty thrilled over it.

Seems that the foreign dogs are back mainly because their owners, abroad, are humane enough to want to protect them from the horror of that inevitable armageddon which is only awaiting a green light. First the gentility of London sent its children to the leafy hamlets least likely to be bombed. Now it is sending its dogs to America.

A peke named Remenhem Derri came in on the mine-ducking S. S. Georgic the other day and won a ribbon in the show for its new owner, a Mrs. Richard S. Quigley, of Lockhaven, Pa. Bassford Golden Nymph also won its ribbon as did another, Queen of Brum, a refugee bull terrier, and a great airedale named Cast Iron Monach, all from England.

It is said that Reg Sparkes, a Toronto fancier, paid $12,000 for that Bassford Golden Nymph, which gives you some idea what these fidos are worth. Or at least what they command.

Gene Tunney was an exhibitor this year. Made a lot of talk. He came up with a massive, unshaven door-breaker named a Komondorock. It's a Hungarian sheep dog, which anyone could summon simply by whistling thrice and adding, "Here boy, here Pannonia Pandur by Byarad Nervere Ordsgacock—Pannonia Tauzia!" The fur-bearing, horse-like creature would immediately gallop to your side, provided you had a fresh elephant thigh-bone in your hand. There were only two of them in the show, perhaps in the country, and Tunney's won the blue ribbon, the silver trophy and the sawbuck prize, which makes Gene a pro. The other owner, we understand, is crying "long count," but isn't expected to get very far with that sort of nonsense.

About 75 per cent of these aristocratic yappers live in kennels through the year and they say around the show that only 50 per cent of them know their names, a pardonable oversight when you see some of the handles which have been fastened on them by owners.

There is no doubt that the game attracts some very nice people, and the thrill some of them get, looking perhaps at the puppy of a great champion in the baby's first competition, is as genuine as the thrill most of us get out of watching DiMag bust one, or Tuffy Leemans cut loose.

Sacrifice Fly Rule Killed; Clubs Gain in 'Farm' Fight

Time at Bat Is Charged To Player

Slugging Averages Will Suffer; Night Game Times Changed At Winter Meeting

By the Associated Press

Bellair, Fla., Feb. 13.—Before adjourning its conference here today with Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, the baseball rules committee knocked the sacrifice fly completely out of the book.

Hereafter when a batter comes up in the clutch and poles out a long fly to score a teammate from third he will be charged merely with a time at bat. As a result, the averages of some of the distance sluggers like Joe DiMaggio might suffer by upward of 10 percentage points.

Back in the old days, and even into the late '20s, a batter was credited with a sacrifice if he advanced a runner from any base. To some stars, such as Rogers Hornsby, this was sometimes good for upward of 30 percentage points in the course of a season.

Griffith's Opinion

Then the rule was altered to take in only runners scoring. And then for several years the sacrifice fly was dropped entirely. It was brought back only last season. The rule makers decided today it should be buried for good.

"It just amounts to giving a batter credit for something he didn't intend to do," declared Owner Clark Griffith, of Washington. "Now if a batter would be willing to go to the plate with runners on base and announce that he intended to hit a sacrifice fly, that would be different. But what if he hit a home run? He would tear down the park if we only credited him was a sacrifice."

After hearing a bellow from General Manager Larry McPhail of Brooklyn, the committee hastily altered the rule it promulgated yesterday saying that no inning of a night game should start after 11:50 p. m. They altered it to read 11:50 "standard time." McPhail protested that some of Brooklyn's games might not get started until 9:30 p. m., daylight time.

The committee also altered slightly the rule governing the distance runners may advance on an overthrow going into the dugout, but turned down a suggestion by Eddie Collins, general manager of the Boston Red Sox, that the catcher be charged with an error on a passed ball.

St. Albans Beats Friends Five, 27 to 18

St. Alban's basketers were never behind yesterday as they ground out a 27-18 victory over Friends at the Saint court for their fourth favorable decision of the year.

From the end of the first period, when they led 6-2 the Saints held their lead safe. They were on the long end at the half, 13-10, and at the three-quarter mark the count was 24-13.

St. Alban's third team played throughout most of the final quarter. Derek Schoenfeld, center, paced the scoring of both team with eight points, though Hannon and Hare accounted for six each. With Armand Newmyer, Friends ace scorer, bottled up throughout the game, point honors for the losers went to Center Knollman, with seven.

St. Louis U. May Abandon Grid Games

By International News Service

St. Louis, Feb. 13.—Discontinuance of intercollegiate football at Washington University of St. Louis became a possibility tonight following disclosure that students and faculty members of the school had been asked by its chancellor for their opinion.

A letter, addressed to Dr. Frank H. Ewerhardt, chairman of the faculty athletic committee, appeared in Student Life, campus publication, today and closed with the remarks:

"It is quite possible that the wisest policy would be its (football's) discontinuance or suspension until the situation is clarified. I am not advocating this course, but wish to call the situation to your attention in order that this action may be taken, if necessary, only wih due regard to all factors."

Chancellor George R. Throop signed the letter.

Washington U.'s head football coach, Jimmy Conzelman, resigned recently after leading the team to the Missouri Valley Conference title. His successor has yet to be appointed.

Tapp and Mayo Gloves Bout Called Off

Opponent Is Sought For Bantam King For Tonight's Fight

Two of the three-round championship matches expected to provide most action in finals of the current Golden Gloves boxing tournament tonight at Turner's Arena were called off by unforeseen circumstances yesterday, leaving the highlight of the night Jimmy DeChard's defense of his heavyweight crown against the National Guard's Don Stetson.

Gilbert Mayo, scheduled to defend his featherweight crown against last year's bantamweight champion, Willie Tapp, will be unable to do so because of the death of his brother in Warrenton, Va.

John Mancini, who was to fight Billy Kekeris, the National Guard's 147-pound champion, was forced out of the match because of an injured ear. He will forfeit to Kekeris. An opponent is being sought for Tapp.

DeChard, Frankie Mann's promising protege, defeated Tony Novak, world's amateur champion, last summer in Griffith Stadium and is considered by local fight followers one of the smoothest boxing machines ever to perform on the Washington's amateur scene.

Stetson, who will weigh in at 194, is the only contender for DeChard's crown. Sharing interest with the heavyweight bout will be the light heavy affair between Jim Brady, of Georgeton University, and Bill Nolan, of the National Guard, and the middleweight between Charley Mamone, of Police Boys' Club, No. 5, and Johnny Rogers, of the National Guard.

Fourteen three-rounders are included on the card. First bout is at 8:30 p. m.

Nelson Stars as Pros Defeat Amateurs in Charity Golf Play

Shoots Six Under Par 66 to Lead Ryder Cup Team's Victory Over Texas Simon Pures

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 13.—Professional golfdom's greatest players, the United States Ryder Cup team, came to the very pillar of American amateur golf today and crushed all doubt that they were masters of the simon pures.

National Open Champion Byron Nelson, who yesterday won the $5,000 Texas Open tournament, led the pros through bitter north winds with a 6-under-par round of 66 to wreck the Texas amateur team in a charity match.

Weather that hindered most of the pro and amateur troupe didn't slow down Lord Byron—around the par 36, 36—72 Dallas Country Club course in 35, 31—66.

Final score of the two-ball and four-ball matches, played on a point basis, was: Professionals, 26; amateurs, 4.

Walter Hagen, playing his first competitive round in many years, captained the Ryder Cuppers and shot two creditable rounds, including a 74.

But Nelson, ill on the Pacific Coast swing and just returning to his game, was the man with the shots. Over the short 2,970-yard last nine he dropped five birdies and four pars.

He teamed with Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., to defeat Harry Todd, of Dallas, Western amateur champion, and John Barnum, of Edinburg, 4 and 3, in the four-ball feature match.

Snead-Guldahl Trail

Lowest professional team of the day was that of Slammin' Sam Snead, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Ralph Guldahl. After feeling their way around the strange course in the morning, they stroked a 7-under-par 6 between them to beat Don Schumacher and O'Hara Watts of Dallas, 4 and 3. Snead, who pumped one tee shot 30 feet past the pin on the 327-yard thirteenth hole, just missing his putt for a deuce, was 70.

The only amateur combination able to make a dent in the pro line-up was that of Jack Munger, of Dallas, former Southern champion, and Bobby Riegel, of Houston, once a member of the Walker Cup squad. They defeated Hagen and Dick Metz in the two-ball match, 2 up, but lost their four-ball match, 1 down.

Timberville Fives Take Two Games

New Market, Va., Feb. 13.—The Timberville Blues again defeated the local cagers, 50 to 41, here yesterday as Cline for the winners tallied 20 points and Moyers followed closely with 18 for the losers. The Timberville Bluettes defeated the local girls 28 to 13.

Two new league records were set in the Maryland-D. C. Ladies League when the Shepherd Park Wine & Liquor Co. team rolled a 622-1,730 high game and set to take three from Occidental, with Rose Tobey taking a 363 high set for the night.

Jessie Sacrey rolled a 144 high game for the night as National Ale took two of three from Shaeffer's Flower Shop. Gifford's took three from Liberty Wallpaper, and REA took three from Adele's Beauty Shop.

QUEEN PIN

Pop Coleman's 134-356 in the Diamond Cab League paced Restaurant to a three-game sweep over Credit Union, and Union Station pulled out of the cellar with another sweep over Concessions. Best set of the night, 391 by Elmer Wesley for Service Station, won the odd game from Hotels.

Schwartz and Perlman Keep Handball Title

Jack Schwartz and Paul Perlman, perennial winners of all doubles handball tournaments in the District, came through again last night in the finals of the D. C. A. A. U. tourney at the Y. M. C. A. by defeating George Wendlandt and Gus Goldstein, 21—11, 9—21 and 21—8.

Purples' Regulars Pile Up Lead; Reserves Finish, Score, 47-31

Gonzaga High's basketball team gave its reserves an opportunity for competition yesterday as it romped to a 47-to-31 victory over the Wilson Teachers College junior varsity at the Gonzaga gym.

Coach Orrel Mitchell started his regular team, but withdrew it soon after it had compiled an impressive lead. Gonzaga led, 26 to 13, at the half time.

Three players shared high-scoring honors for Gonzaga as Vinnie Burke, Bob O'Lone and Elmer Raba each counted 9 points apiece. All yielded top individual honors to Battaglini, Wilson forward, who accounted for 12 points.

The victory permitted the Purple to acquire an even break for 14 games this season.

Green Terrors Check Eagles' Rally to Win

Special Dispatch to The Post

Westminster, Md., Feb. 13.—The Green Terrors of Western Maryland came from behind and staved off a late rally of American University here tonight to take a 50-41 victory in a thrilling cage game.

Off to a sizzling start, the Eagles held an 11-7 lead with 10 minutes of the first half left, but fell behind to trail, 23-16, at the half. The Eagles came on again, however, scoring 6 points before Western Maryland could hit the basket. The pace was too much for the D. C. delegation from there on.

It was American's third loss in six games. Accountable in some degree was the loss of three first-stringers via the foul route in the middle of the last half. Ernie Webb, Carl Byham and Morrison were all waved to the bench.

New Champion of Dachshunds Greeted by Applause and Booes

Helmar Flottenberg Wins in Upset As Herman Rinkton Is Passed Up

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 13.—Ch. Helmar Flottenberg, making his first appearance at a Westminster Kennel Club show, tonight captured one of the old show's most sought-after prizes—best of breed among the dachshunds.

The 3-year-old, who also went best at the Baltimore show recently, won over a notable field in a competition that started this morning and didn't end until late tonight.

In winning, the smooth brown champion not only heard the plaudits of the crowd—but its boos as well. For in going up he defeated Ch. Herman Rinkton, owned by Mrs. Annis A. Jones, of South Orange, N. J., possessor of probably the outstanding daschshund record in the country, and when Judge Laurence A. Horswell passed him over in favor of Helmar from the Ellenbert Farms of Herbert Bertrand, of Greenwich, Conn., he was roundly booed.

Ch. Hollow Hill Pepser, an upstanding black and white, took the best of breed in the dalmatians from one of the finest fields ever to compete in a Westminster show. He is owned by the Strathglass Kennels of Port Chester, N. Y.

The dog fancier's belief that "breed will tell" was proven in four important classes.

Best of breed among collies, the magnificent Tri-Color Ch. Hertzville Headstudy from the Chicago kennels of C. J. Cassleman and Thomas M. Halpin, is a son of Ch. Hertzville Headstone that went to best of groups here two years ago.

Then the English setter, Ch. Maro of Maridor, owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Duke, of Tuxedo Park N. Y., went best of breed among the setters—and Maro is a little brother of Daro of Maridor, who went best of show at Westminster two years ago and then suffered a severe illness that kept the dog out of the show ring until today.

In his attempted comeback, Daro failed miserably, finishing no better than fourth in his class.

The winning poodle, a powdered aristrocrat of dogdom, is Ch. Blakeen Eiger, a son of Ch. Nunsoe Duc de La Terrace of Blakeen, best poodle at Westminster in 1935. And the Kerry blue terrier winner, Cnoc Luing Surprise, owned by Dr. Edward R. Cunniffe, of New York City, had to beat her own mother, the fine Ch. Bumble Bee of Delwin, winner of many blues.

Otherwise the afternoon was highlighted by Illinois victories in breeds of Ch. Boynehouse Brutus of Harham in the airedale and Ch. Afra V. Hoheluft, in the German shepherds. Boynehouse Brutus is owned by Harold M. Florsheim of Deerfield, Ill., and Afra V. Hoheluft by Owen A. West of Lake Forest, Ill.

Rough Riders Bounce Back Into Victory Column; Travis Stars

Tumbled from the undefeated ranks in local scholastic circles Monday, Roosevelt's Rough Riders rushed back into the victory column yesterday with a 29-to-21 triumph over Montgomery Blair, on the Thirteenth street court.

The team which bowed to St. John's, 26 to 24, went into the lead in the first period and stayed out front the rest of the game. Four points in the opening stanza by Ernie Travis and Hymie Perlo, during which Blair was held scoreless, gave the Riders enough margin to work on, and they were leading, 10 to 8, at the half. In the third quarter Roosevelt clicked for a 24-to-14 lead and had no trouble the rest of the way.

Travis, gangly center, won high point honors with 11, and George West was second with 8. Johnny Norris' 9 markers paced the wild-shooting Blairites.

Judge Landis Relents After Stormy Row

Commissioner Okays Owners' Stand on System; Believes His Ruling Has Helped

By the Associated Press

Bellair, Fla., Feb. 13.—Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and a group of owners and officials of both major leagues met in a dramatic "emergency" session today and reached a compromise on the baseball farm system that cleared the atmosphere for the time being, at least.

The commissioner backed down slightly from the stern and unyielding attitude which recently has thrown club officials into a turmoil, and the officials met him half way. The clubs will go right on having their farm systems, but Landis came out of the meeting satisfied that he had done something toward protecting minor league players.

The commissioner, obviously aware of the unrest within the whole baseball structure since his recent drastic decision against the Detroit club, and of the necessity for reaching some common ground, called the meeting unexpectedly at noon today at the conclusion of the two-day session of the rules committee.

Griff in Battle

Those who participated in the noisy and hair-trigger meeting included President Ford Frick of the National League, President Will Harridge of the American League; Presidents Clark Griffith of Washington, Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals, Bob Quinn of the Boston Bees, General Manager Eddie Collins of the Boston Red Sox and General Manager Larry MacPhail of Brooklyn and W. G. Bramham, minor league commissioner.

Here is what they actually did: They agreed to put to a vote of the major and minor leagues an amendment to rule 11 (1) to read as follows:

"A player re-acquired by the same club or system shall, so far as rule 11 (C) 1 is concerned, be credited with having been under minor league optional assignment for the intervening period; provided that if re-acquired by a major league club, that club shall be charged with one season of major league optional service and the balance of the player's minor league service shall be charged as minor league optional service.

"A player acquired from a lower club of the same ownership or control shall, for the purposes of this rule, be regarded as re-acquired."

Landis agreed that, if the amendment is adopted, he will suspend paragraphs 3 and 5 and his bulletin of January 15 pending subsequent consideration of general revision of baseball administrative rules.

Landis Is Pleased

Landis would not comment upon the amendment, but he appeared well enough pleased. His secretary, Leslie O'Connor, did his best to explain the thing in one-syllable words:

"It merely," he said, "prevents an extension of the period of three years in which a minor league club could option a player and three years in which a major league club could option a player. Under the old conditions it was possible to extend these periods through control of the club that held the player, which obviated the necessity of making any working agreements.

"In other words, it represents an effort to work out a compromise. The commissioner wants to protect the players, and he believes this will do it. This amendment takes away the incentive for keeping a player in the minors without option. It removes 99 per cent of the objection."

Flinchum Rides Another 'Triple;' Jockey Caffarella Hurt

Lewis Rider Has Broken Collarbone

Spill Occurs in Front Of Grandstand in 7th Race When Mount Is Jammed on Rail

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Feb. 13.—Apprentice Jockey Flinchum continued his amazing riding here this afternoon, scoring his third triple of the meeting and sending his winning number to 33 so far.

Flinchum also has one "home run" to his credit—when he brought the favored Stand Alone along in time to capture the mile and a furlong seventh race by a half-length. It was a double for Warren Wright and Trainer Ben Jones.

Stand Alone looked like a hopeless horse on the backstretch. But the Display colt showed the courage of his sire and wore down the pace-making Miss B. B. just before the finish to return $7. Success Story was a well-beaten third.

Jockey Hurt in Spill

Flinchum brought home Sallie Kay in the second race at a $12.90 price and then piloted Taxes under theo wire first in the fifth race to pay his backers $3.90.

Patrons received their second bad scare in as many days when another jockey figured in a spectacular spill this afternoon. Mike Caffarella, one of the leading apprentice lads here, went down in full view of the grandstand fans when his mount in the 7-furlong third race, A. B. Christopher's Discobolo, got into a jam near the inner rail and stumbled.

Caffarella suffered a broken left collarbone and was taken to Jackson Memorial Hospital for treatment. The dark-skinned youngster, who is under contract to Mrs. E. Graham Lewis and who hails from Schenectady, N. Y., appeared to be trying to drive his mount through an opening while in sixth place.

Discobolo, favorite in the field of a dozen $1,500 claiming horses, temporarily lost his footing and his rider slipped out of the saddle. The remainder of the field galloped by before Caffarella could be seen spread out on the ground by the rail.

Maryland Sensation

The upstate New York youngster was the sensation of Maryland's fall racing season, scoring many times there, especially in distance events. No other rider was as popular as the swarthy apprentice when Bowie wound up the Eastern season.

The previous day, Ronnie Nash went down at the far turn when his mount, Gallant Risk, stumbled. Nash was walking around here today, merely bruised, but resting up before returning to action. Caffarella will be out of the saddle several weeks.

Discobolo never was better than fifth in the running. The race produced an upset victory for Ken's Revenge, which ran over the early leaders in the stretch and won by a half length to pay $77.30 for $2. Day Is Done, another long shot, closed a big gap to finish second, a length before Whisper.

Three Flamingo eligibles were among the eight 3-year-olds that clashed over the 6 furlongs in the fourth dash. Lemar Stock Farm's Multitude, one of that trio, drove to a length and a half victory in 1:11 4-5. Scylla was second, a head before the slow-starting Jessie Gladys.

KEN'S REVENGE, well ridden, gradually improved his position on the outside and, responding gamely to punishment, drew out in the last 50 yards. DAY IS DONE, slow to get going, closed a big gap in the last 3 furlongs and was going fastest of all at the finish. WHISPER, prominent all the way, assumed a brief lead through the stretch, but then faltered. PRADIS finished well. DISCOBOLO ran onto the heels of one of his opponents, tumbled and unseated his rider.

MULTITUDE, going in his best form, bettered his position steadily after being straightened into the stretch, took command at sixteenth mile out and was going away at the finish. SCYLLA forced a steady early pace and raced CUCKOO MAN into submission, held on gamely when the real test came and outlasted JESSIE GLADYS. The latter, slow to get going, closed a big gap. YES OR NO, hard urged, finished stoutly, but could not get up.

BULL WHIP moved up menacingly on the inside approaching the furlong pole, but hung in the final drive. MUTINOUS dropped back the opening quarter mile, swung around the field turning into the stretch and finished stoutly. EARLY AUTUMN quit badly.

PRETTY PET, a keen contender on the outside from the start under slight restraint, moved up gamely when placed to pressure and drew out in the final drive. COUNTERPOISE, hustled to the front, set a fast early pace, but faltered when the final issue came. ZEVSON, eased off the pace, came to the outside entering the stretch and finished stoutly. CHIP IN was in tight quarters early and hung in the last furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:03. Winner, Calumet Farms' b. c. STAND ALONE, stoutly restrained until well around the lower turn, improved his position steadily when placed to pressure and wore MISS B. B. down in the last strides. MISS B. B. rushed through to take a long lead in the early stages and under pressure the last 3 furlongs, faltered when challenged. SUCCESS STORY, well placed throughout, held on gamely to outlast ROSE OUZEL. The latter finished with a belated rush.

WINGED VICTORY, nearest in pursuit of the pacemaker, faltered in the final furlong. BESS B. ran a dull race.

Pikesville Show Draws D. C. Entries

The 110th Field Artillery Horse Show, to be held in the Pikesville (Md.) Armory Friday and Saturday, has attracted several entries from the vicinity of Washington who hope to share in the cash awards offered by the committee.

Local exhibitors who will be competing with Baltimore's best hunters and open jumpers include Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Fred Hughes, jr.'s, Black Caddy, Isabelle Handy's Carrie Knight, Samuel Bogley's Ring Master and Hal Claggett's Black Knight. Dean Rathbun, jr., one of the most promising of the District's younger riders, will take his Chit-Chat for the pony and horsemanship classes, and is rated an excellent chance in the junior division.

Banks Ready To Finance Big Business Rise

Poll of 3,000 Bank Executives Indicates Recent Uptrend

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Evidence of business confidence throughout the country and an optimistic forecast for the immediate vicinity are found in the latest surveys of Banking Magazine and United Business Service. With the greatest volume of bank money in history waiting for something to happen and the greatest opportunities in history waiting for money, there exists a setting for an extraordinary period of business activity, the first-menitoned survey reminds.

The monthly cross-index of business opinion, compiled by the magazine through a poll of 3,000 bank directors and bank presidents in all sections of the coutnry, shows a slightly improved trend, as compared with preceding months. Of those canvassed, 5 per cent reported business getting better; 34 per cent found conditions about the same and 11 per cent announced a decline.

United Business Service distributes a cheering prediction for the country, and states February business in Maryland should be about 12.1 per cent better than a year ago. Virginia should do more business than a year ago, but the gain is expected to be only approximately 3.8 per cent.

Investors Syndicate

President E. E. Crabb of Investors Syndicate, which has an office in Washington, announces a record amount of money will be loaned on homes this year, by that organization. The syndicate, he says, plans to loan $35,000,000 in 1940 on residences, adding there is still plenty of room for new housing in America.

"Our company during 1939," he states, "loaned slightly more than $31,000,000. Of these 1939 loans, approximately $20,000,000 was for new construction. Building costs during the last year advanced very little and therefore, we anticipate a continuance of a normal, healthy new construction trend during 1940.

"Our annual housing survey, taken in areas containing two-fifths of the Nation's population, shows us there is still plenty of room for new housing in America. Basically the United States, despite the uncertainty of the duration and scope of the European war, is in an excellent position to improve its economic condition.

Investors Syndicate loaned $28,009,516.17 on new and existing properties in 1938, $25,354,772.04 in 1937, $25,743,054.85 in 1936 and $9,403,677.94 in 1935. These loans were made in 36 States, the District of Columbia and in 2 provihces of the Dominion of Canada.

Air Travel to Chicago

A 69 per cent gain in air travel between Washington and Chicago via Cleveland has resulted since inauguration of all-Douglas service January 1 by Pennsylvania Central Airlines and United Air lines, D. Walter Swan, district traffic manager of United, reports.

With replacement of its twin-engined ten-passenger Boeings with 21-passenger Douglases, P. C. A. and Untied made available double the number of seats, in addition to offering the latest type of equipment on the original Washington-Chicago route via Cleveland. Instead of the seasonal falling off, traffic, with the new equipment on the Washington - Cleveland - Chicago route, has increased, he said.

Steel Operations Drop for Fifth Week

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Steel mills operations will drop 2.9 points this week to 68.8 per cent of the industry's capacity, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. The downward revision was the fifth in a row.

Last week production was at 71.7 per cent of capacity. A month ago it was 84.8 per cent, a year ago 54.8 per cent.

Wheat Prices Sag After Early Rise

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Wheat prices quickly stepped up a cent a bushel today, but were unable to hold gains and finished unchanged to ¾ cent under Saturday's close.

The early upturn largely reflected yesterday's firmness at Winnipeg, where prices climbed about ⅛ cent while the market here was closed for a holiday, and continued opening strength in the Canadian market today.

May contracts here climbed to $1.00⅛, up ¾, but at that level selling offers increased and the delivery thereafter remained under pressure, falling to a low of 98¾. July contracts, representing the new crop, reached 97¾, up a cent, and held up better throughout the session.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¾ lower, May, 99⅞@98⅝; July, 96⅝; corn unchanged to ⅛ off, May 56@55⅞, July 56⅛; oats unchanged to ⅛ down; rye ⅛-¼ down; soy beans a cent off and lard unchanged to 3 cents a hundredweight lower.

Washington Business 4% Above Normal

2% Gain in Month; A Year Ago 11% Below Normal

New York, Feb. 13.—Washington was one of the 94 areas in the United States where business showed an improvement in January over the index for December, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the business survey department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit national advertising concern.

Business conditions in Washington as of February 1 stood at 4 per cent above normal, a gain of 2 per cent from the standing of January 1. On February 1 last year, the city's business index stood at 11 per cent below normal.

Gains Are General

"A substantial majority of the trading sections of the country moved in faster business tempo during January," the report states in its survey of 147 marketing centers. "Indexes in 94 areas made strong gains over December, indexes in only 44 areas declined and 9 remained without change."

The report states that the greatest gains were registered in the following areas: Albany, Atlanta, Augusta, Bangor, Binghamton, Birmingham, Camden, Columbia, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Greenville, Hartford, Indianapolis, Lansing, Los Angeles, Miami, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Newark, Oklahoma City, Portland (Oreg.), Reno, Rockford, St. Paul, Seattle, Sioux Falls, Spokane, yracuse, Topeka, Williamsport and Wilmington.

Cotton Prices Drop 65 to 85 Cents a Bale

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Cotton futures broke $1 a bale today before trade buying and local covering halted the decline. Final prices were 13 to 17 points lower.

The market dropped lower in line with foreign markets and declines at New Orleans over the Lincoln Day recess. New Orleans buying rallied the list back to the previous close but around noon Bombay loosened a flood of sellnig orders and prices headed downward.

The East Indian offerings, estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000 bales, were attributed to a sharp contraction in Bombay-New York price differences. Declining prices attracted further liquidation, mostly in the March delivery, but the trade and local buying finally halted the retreat.

Cottonseed Oil

Rallying tendencies in cottonseed oil futures were nipped in the bud today. Final prices, however, were only 1 to 2 points lower.

The list was bid up at the start following a bullish interpretation of the January consumption report. Gains running to around 10 points were cancelled when grains failed to hold early advances and hog prices declined.

Sales totaled 134 lots; March, 7.00; May, 7.12; July, 7.22; September, 7.29.

Crude oil held unchanged as a nominal figure of 6 cents a pound in the Southeast and Valley, Texas, bid, 5¾@5⅞.

Bank of Mexico To Support Peso At 5.99 to Dollar

Mexico City, Feb. 13 (AP).—Government and banking circles reported today that the Bank of Mexico and its associated institutions had agreed in a series of private conferences to support the peso at its present exchange rate of 5.99 to the dollar.

The banking authorities also decided there should be no restriction on facilities at this time for credit intended to stimulate production but that all loans solicited for speculative operations should be refused.

Reliable sources said the banks' directors expressed the opinion that the current exchange rate of the peso faithfully reflected Mexico's economic and foreign trade position.

Little fear was evident, these quarters asserted, that Mexico's national economy would be unbalanced should the United States decide to suspend further purchases of Mexican silver—purchases which have been an important source of foreign exchange for the nation.

The bankers were confident that an adjustment between exports and imports could be made which would compensate for the stoppage of silver buying.

Brokers' Standards Are Held On Par With Average Business

New York, Feb. 13.—Brokers' business standards, in the judgment of 56.7 per cent of the customers of member firms of the New York Stock Exchange, are on a par with those of the average businessman; 42.7 per cent rate brokers' standards higher than those of businessmen generally, and 7.3 per cent graded them lower, according to the results of the Roper survey, published today in The Exchange, published by the New York Stock Exchange.

This section of the Roper survey was confined to interviews with 1,000 customers of member firms—900 men and 100 women—a cross-section of America's stock and bond buyers.

"Only one out of five had specific suggestions to offer for improving brokerage service," the survey says. "Summarized, the report revealed a broad working knowledge of the stock exchange and of the mechanism of brokerage firms as well. The scope of misinformation, hearsay impressions and prejudice was small, as a comprehensive study of the replies indicated, and far fewer of the people interviewed had no opinions, or scanty ones, than in the case of the previous unlimited poll of 5,000 people, covering the public in general.

Customer Attitude

47 per cent favor present Government regulations, or more.

34.2 per cent want some Government regulation, but less than now.

54.9 per cent want margin trading controlled rigidly.

48.9 per cent think present marketability sufficient.

43 per cent want greater marketability.

64 per cent say "thin" market has not caused them to cut down the volume of their transactions.

30.3 per cent assert it has lessened their participation.

55.6 per cent would keep present law in respect to company officers buying their company's stock or make it more stringent.

58.3 per cent favor present methods for handling odd-lots.

64.5 per cent think brokerage commissions should cover all charges and are opposed to separate service charges.

30.7 per cent are in favor of charges for special services.

Price Changes Follow Irregular Pattern of Business Developments;

New York, Feb. 13.—Unsettling effects of another decline in the steel operating rate and weakness in cotton futures produced backing and filling movements with reduced volume in share trading today. The list ended about even with independent strength in merchandising, oil and manufacturing groups being offset by lower tendencies in steels and rail equipments. Motors, while active, made no progress excepting Studebaker, which led the list on turnover of 38,300 shares and recorded a new high. Aircrafts sold off with Pan-American Airways down 2 points in brisk dealings.

Bonds were featured by strength in some South American issues, notably Brazilian and Colombian liens. Interest was caused by Secretary of State Hull's announcement that resumption of payments on certain Brazilian dollar bonds now in default is being discussed, as well as to actual resumption on two Colombian governmental issues. Cotton futures were down 13 to 17 points on liquidation. Wheat ended unchanged to ¾ cent lower.

The low-priced shares again dominated the most active list, most of them selling at better levels, including International Mercantile Marine and Celotex. Texas Corporation and Standard Oil of New Jersey joined the 15 leaders, each with gains of ⅜ point. Chemicals made good progress with several selling at new highs. American Tobacco B was at a new top and others at their best prices for a long period were Clark Equipment, Crown Cork & Seal, General Mills, Loft, Melville Shoe and Procter & Gamble.

Mercantile Marine

Interest in International Mercantile Marine was traceable to announcement by Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, that he is seeking a deal on trade routes to put idle American ships back on the high seas. Utilities were steady without much response to several newly formulated plans for financing. Railroad stocks were mixed as early reports on carloadings indicated a dip in tonnage.

The contra-seasonal decline in steel product shipments by United States Steel Corporation for January against December was not regarded bearishly in the street although the drop was substantial, more than 20 per cent in fact. December shipments by the largest interest were at record levels for the month, the usual slowing-down influence of holidays and year-end inventory taking being offset in 1939 by war influences and a rush to ship low-priced business. Deliveries through January, while lighter than for December, were still a good way ahead of the January, 1938, figures. Meanwhile another cut in mill and furnace schedules brought steel ingot output to just under 69 per cent of capacity for the current week, the lowest rate since the Labor Day, 1939, week and representing the sixth consecutive weekly drop.

On the stock market's relation to business as an indicator or reflector, several of the brokerage houses pointed out that so far in 1940 the performance of share prices has closely duplicated that of January-February, 1939. It was also emphasized that stock market lows were recorded for both 1938 and 1939 well in advance of the lows of business activity for those years.

The better tone to petroleum issues was not explained in the news although switching to oils is a usual procedure with some traders at this time of year, just in advance of the season of large consumption for gasoline and other products of the industry.

Deficit Spending Called Bootstrap Levitation

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Government's deficit spending policy was termed an obstacle to business recovery today by Harley Lutz, professor of public finance at Princeton University, addressing the mid-winter trust conference of the American Bankers Association.

"We have before us," Lutz said, "the outline of a beautiful vicious circle. The taxes that can be collected from a $90,000,000,000 National income will not suffice to cover the kind of spending program that was launched to build us up to the $90,000,000,000 income level, and we shall be told that the Government is shooting at $100,000,000,000, where it hopes to balance the budget.

"This kind of logic belongs in the same class with theories of perpetual motion and bootstrap levitation. The needed driving force must come from private economy. It will never come from a policy of Governmental deficit financing."

Another speaker, Roland E. Clark, of Portland, Me., president of the association's trust division, said:

"The domestic situation in our country gives us cause to fear that we may fail to preserve our long cherished right of individual initiative unhampered by undue governmental regulation and administration, and also fail to keep our time-honored form of government by legislation enacted by representatives of the people, thus resulting in a government enacted by executive decree and subject to the whim of bureaucratic administrative officers."

Brewers Lose, Gain Player For Week-End

N. Y. U. Guard Added To Roster; Wilson's Knee Forces Rest

The Washington Heurich Brewers yesterday had gained and lost a player while awaiting important American Basketball League tests over the week-end. On Saturday night the Brewers are to visit Philadelphia for a game with the league leading Philadelphia Sphas while on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock they will entertain the formidable Troy Celtics at Heurich gymnasium.

Prior to his departure for an American Basketball League meeting in New York last night, Business Manager Bob McDonald of the Brewers announced the signing of Art Resnick, former New York University guard recently declared ineligible, by Heurich. Resnick is 6 feet 2 inches and weighs 210 pounds and also had been sought by the Baltimore Clippers.

Simultaneously it was learned that Whitey Wilson, valuable forward, had twisted his left knee and probably will not be available for the week-end tests. Wilson had been hitting his hottest pace prior to incurring his injury in last Sunday night's game with the Baltimore Clippers in Baltimore.

New City-Wide Sports Group Formed Here

'Washington A. A.' to Foster Athletics for Adults; Teams Planned

A city wide sports organization, tentatively named "The Washington Athletic Association," was formed last night at the Recreation Department office. With the stimulation of interest in athletics among adults as its objective, the new sports body expects to sponsor track, lacrosse and other competitions. Dick Tennyson, director of city-wide athletic program of the Recreation Department, presided over last night's session.

A steering committee was named including Thomas King, Joe Deckman, Robert Acorn, Jake Reck and Harry Woodfield to adopt a program to be presented to the organization at the next meeting on February 27. Others present were: Ed Daly, George M. Norris, Dorsey Grimth, and Angus Lamond.

Anyone interested in adult sports is requested to get in touch with Dick Tennyson at 1740 Massachusetts avenue northwest or phone Michigan 1155.

Natie Brown Is Suspended

Although Brown's ultimate knockout victory over McDonald came as the result of a clean blow, the fight had not been without its foul tactics earlier, the commission indicated.

Brown had been warned by Referee Ray Bowen at least six times to keep his punches up, an official said. When McDonald finally went down, however, the blow that sent him to the canvas was in fair territory, it was said.

Thus the 60-day suspension of Brown was explained, the extra 30 days being added because of his performance against McDonald.

The commission sounded a cheering note for Natie, however, with a paragraph stating:

"The commission is in sympathy with the comeback plans of any local boxer and urges Brown to devote his period of suspension to serious attempts to get into shape."

Brown's suspension dates from February 6, the date of his memorable comeback debut after a years' absence from any sport with the lumbering and sadly out of condition McAvoy—a fighter who was supposed to be nothing more than a trial horse for the veteran Washington fighter.

Referring to its warning prior to the Monday night bout, the commission stated that "despite this warning and repeated warnings by the referee, Brown repeatedly fouled McDonald."

A boxer long out of the ring "first loses his judgment of distance," the commission stated, adding that "only by arduous training and conditioning can this shortcoming be corrected." In a final paragraph the District boxing body said:

"Whether or not foul blows do a great deal of damage, the commission believes such blows persistently delivered present a spectacle not pleasing to the public and harmful to boxing as a clean sport."

The National Boxing Association, it is expected, will be advised of Brown's suspension, and the District's ruling will be observed in N. B. A. States.

Tech Loses, 46-39; Drop Series Chance

Walsh was Tech's standard-bearer as he matched Placos point for point. Placos was not alone in scoring, however, as Jack Koontz, converted gridder, rendered him valuable assistance in this department.

In the third period Anacostia tightened the web of its zone and Tech consequently was unable to move inside the free throw circle. "Dutch" Teeple attempted many long set shots in this quarter which ended with Anacostia on the long end of a 33-28 score.

Bill (Shrimp) Brewer joined Walsh in the scoring column in the final period as Tech vainly attempted to overhaul the hosts. Brewer, heretofore an obscure figure in Tech's scoring, bucketed eight points but overzealous Maroon guarding served to increase Anacostia's margin in the last few minutes of play.

town at one victory each, will depend greatly on its 6-foot 5-inch center, Carl Byham, who has scored 55 points in five games.

The Eagles, since their early season loss to the Hoyas, have been playing improved basketball and boast recent victories over Randolph-Macon and Delaware.

Starting with Byham against Georgetown will be Capt. George Brown and Hugo Schulze, guards, and Roadman Keene and Ernie Webb, forwards.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The most exciting hand of a rubber bridge tournament occurred during the semifinals when Mrs. Jackson Dykeman and M. D. Maier, youngest member of the Four Aces, met Sherman Stearns and Donald B. Tansill.

Both pairs managed to get vulnerable in short order, and there were but two or three deals to go when today's hand was dealt by Maier. Stearns and Tansill put up a desperate attempt at sacrifice bidding, hoping to get off with a small set and prevent Mrs. Dykeman and Jimmy from winning the rubber in the next two deals.

The final result was a horrible massacre, as Stearns was set 2,000 points, or seven tricks, at his six spade sacrifice.

Six clubs would be defeated, except for the whimsical distribution of the cards which left Stearns without any hearts to lead.

In the play Jimmy led his ace of clubs, which was ruffed in dummy. The ace and king of hearts were cashed, Stearns discarding the two losing clubs from his hand. Then a low spade was led toward the ten; when Mrs. Dykeman showed out Stearns muttered strange imprecations under his breath; Maier won the trick with the jack, and quickly removed dummy's two remaining spades with is ace and king. He followed with his queen of clubs, forcing East to ruff, and shortening him to one trump.

A diamond was played to dummy's jack; Mrs. Dykeman took the ace and led, still another club, forcing out Stearn's last trump and putting the kiss of death on his hopes for the match.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Listen!

with Slocum

This being the season of abstinence and self-denial we listened to the radio yesterday. It was fun even if our reward remains in heaven.

A highspot of the day's doings was an interview on Elinor Lee's program. Our Nell had a gent named M. L. Sody, a figure of some consequence among Washington's 120 United Food Stores, with her. Mr. Sody, who will henceforth be known as M. L., despite the temptation to call him "Three-fingers and No" Sody, had some interesting tales to tell about Washington's shoppers.

M. L. says that Washington and Hollywood have one thing in common. This discouraging thought was quickly corrected when he pointed out that we both (that's Hollywood and Washington) have a large class of food purchasers who do the trick on the run. That is, they get through work, pick up a lamb chop and the morning's gin and go home and mix well. Oddly enough that practice is extremely uncommon everywhere but the Nation's Capital and the Nation's glamour belt.

Another point M. L. brought out concerned the Washington housewife and the telephone interests. Fifty per cent of the shopping done in town is done via the telephone. And in the morning, too. Those housewives as like to look at what they are buying descend on the grocers later in the morning. Things are quiet in the afternoon, then pick up considerably when our vast horde of shoppers-on-the-run swing into action and for one dizzy, glamourous half-hour Hollywood and poor little Washington are as one.

Food is definitely here to stay. For instance, WJSV carries no less than 86 network programs about various types of food and 13 local programs re same. And people listen to these broadcasts, often I am sure, because they are really interested in food.

Perhaps we should have called this "Food for Thought" or maybe we should have just called it "Struttin' With a Gluttin."

Today's temperatures in Florida averaged 72 degrees.

THE DRAGON'S TEETH
By ELLERY QUEEN

Chapter 32

AND, with a yearning glance toward Kerrie, Beau drew Ellery aside, handing him a large manila envelope. Ellery quickly extracted from the envelope what looked like a photostat, while Beau whispered in his ear for some time. And as Mr. Queen both looked and listened, an expression of beatitude overspread his lean countenance.

He advanced toward Goossens, waving the photostat.

Goossens frowned. "It's all very dramatic, as you say, but is it legal?" He laughed shortly. "Don't forget, Mr. Queen, I'm a lawyer. If you're foolish enough to take this before a court, I'll make you wish you'd never been born—any of you! Your so-called evidence can be blown to bits—teeth marks. Pen and pencil. An old pipe . . . Why, no jury in the world would swallow that sort of stuff!"

"Possibly not," murmured Mr. Queen, "but we're now in possession of a third item of evidence that a jury will swallow.

"So far I've shown that you own the pencil found on the scene of the crime—proving opportunity; and that you could have tipped off the police about the faked marriage—your second error, by the way. Now I'll prove you had motive—that you, and you alone, fulfill the third requirement of Ann Bloomer's murderer!

"This third proof will implicate you directly, Mr. Goossens. It will indicate that you were Ann Bloomer's silent partner. It will indicate that the plot, from the beginning, was your brain-child—the plot to palm off an imposter as Margo Cole. In fact, I think I know when you conceived and executed that part of the plot, Mr. Goossens!"

"Indeed?" sneered the lawyer.

"You got your first inspiration when De Carlos, pretending to be Cole, delivered Cole's sealed will. You opened that will, Goossens, and you had a reason for opening it—a reason that will be clear to these people when I reveal the nature of my last proof.

"You opened the will, digested its conditions, and saw your opportunity. You left very suddenly on what purported to be a 'business trip'—and where did you go? To Europe, Goossens! Your own secretary gave me that information when I telephoned your office a few days after De Carlos' visit as Cole . . . in fact, I remember it especially well because just as I set down the telephone my appendix burst. A pathological commemoration of an important event, Goossens! The only trouble was that I didn't appreciate its significance at the time.

"And why did you go to Europe suddenly? Because you knew that Margo Cole had lived in France. Because you knew so much about Margo Cole's history that it was evident to your quick, clever and harried intelligence that an impostor would have to come from France, too. Somehow during that business trip you ran across Ann Bloomer, exactly the type of woman your plan required. And she agreed to go in with you."

GOOSSENS bit his lip. His cheeks were chalky now.

"You had the proofs of Margo Cole's identity in your possession. You didn't give them to the Bloomer woman in France. You probably coached her in Margo Cole's history then, but you held back the proofs until the last moment—fearing, very justly, a possible double cross. You handed Ann Bloomer those proofs as she was leaving the Normandie in Quarantine! For it was you, and you alone, brief case in hand, who boarded the Normandie ostensibly to greet 'Margo Cole' and escort her to the cutter in which the rest of us were waiting. Those proofs of Margo Cole's identity were in your own brief case when you boarded the Normandie. But they were in Ann Bloomer's bag when you escorted her to the cutter a few minutes later.

"But Ann Bloomer double-crossed you after all. Entrenched here as Margo Cole, she backed out of her bargain with you. Also, she had probably investigated you undercover, in her canny way, and discovered that you were in a stew of trouble, Mr. Goossens—oh, a veritable salmagundi! You've been quite a rounder in your time—you live with your azure-blooded wife for polite reasons only; your real life is replete with women, champagne, gambling parlors, and the like. Your father left you a respectable practice in the administration of estates, but you went through his money quickly . . . and then you began to race through the moneys entrusted to your stewardship as trustee of estates.

"And so now you had started a vicious circle—constantly stealing from one estate to cover a shortage in sonther, and you had reached a point where you could conceal your peculations no longer without fresh sources of funds. You were desperate, and that was your motive for leaping at the chance to make a fortune quickly when fate dropped the Cole estate into your lap.

"Somehow Ann Bloomer, I believe, found all this out, and knew she had a powerful weapon against you. One word from her to arouse suspicion that you were fraudulently administering the estate in your trusteeship, and you were ruined. That was the weapon she held over you as she wriggled out of her pact to split the Margo Cole income with you.

"You were probably clever enough not to show your rage. You saw another way: to remove the menace you yourself, a modern Frankenstein, had created—this female monster—and at the same time—your third and last and most important motive—to gain absolute control over the Cole millions!

"BECAUSE it was in line with your new goal, you even fell in with Ann's pleasant little scheme to murder Kerrie. She may have forced you to become her accomplice, using her threat of exposure as a lever; I don't know; it would be the logical thing for her to do, because as an accomplice you wouldn't be able to expose her as a murderess.

"At any rate, when the attacks failed, and Ann visited this hotel room to taunt Kerrie, you shot the woman dead. By doing this you accomplished at one swoop a number of purposes: to revenge yourself on her, to prevent her from revealing your identity as her partner, to be rid of her permanently, to frame Kerrie Shawn for the murder and be rid of her; and the ultimate goal of all—to be free then to administer the Cole estate for charity, since the will provided that if the heirs died, you were still to administer the estate for charitable purposes! In that capacity, you would have a peculative field-day lasting years. And you reasoned—accurately, I think—that you could easily persuade Mr. Edmund De Carlos, your co-trustee, to swing in with you.

"While I may be slightly off in some of the details, I fancy I've roughly covered the subject, Goossens?"

Goossens stammered: "You—you talked about a proof of motive." Then he got a grip on his nerves and deliberately smiled. "And I've listened and heard nothing but the ravings of a fantastic imagination. Where's this wonderful proof of yours?"

"Admirable, Goossens, admirable," applauded Mr. Queen. You could have been a great trial lawyer; quite the dramatic flair. Do you deny," he snapped, "that you put Ann Bloomer up to posing as Margo Cole?"

"I certainly do deny it." replied the lawyer hoarsely, "I never saw the woman before she showed up on the Normandie. I was taken in just as the rest of you were. You can't make me the goat, Queen! I thought she was really Margo Cole!"

"Ah," said Mr. Queen; and his quiet sigh was so fat with satisfaction that Goossens stiffened and grew still. "You really thought she was Margo Cole." Mr. Queen turned swiftly. "You heard that statement, Sampson? That's the killer-diller. That's a demonstrable lie!"

"What do you mean?" whispered Goossens.

"IN THIS manila envelope," replied Mr. Queen, handing it to the district attorney, "is the plain evidence of your lie. It's the third and completely incriminating article of evidence I promised to produce against you.

"It esxplains how you knew all about Margo Cole even before the Cole will was delivered to you. It explains how you happened to have in your possession all the proofs of Margo Cole's identity. Shall I explain how that was?

"In 1925, when Margo Cole's mother died in France, Margo left that country and came to the United States. She was penniless and probably too angry with Cadmus Cole to look him up. She drifted out to California—Mr. Rummell, who has been exceedingly busy in the last eight hours, and being instructed what to search for, has found the evidence and uncovered a good deal of the story. Margo Cole became a waitress in a Los Angeles restaurant.

'And that's where you met her, Goossens—while you were attending college in Los Angeles in 1926. You were 25 years old and already gorging wild oats. You got drunk one night and married Margo Cole! You kept that marirage secret even from your father. Your wife, the true Margo, died in Los Angeles shortly after, and you had her buried quickly and quietly, no doubt heaving a great sigh of relief at her having considerately got you out of a bad hole.

"In this manila envelope," cried Mr. Queen, "are the photostats of two documents: Margo Cole's death certificate, in which she is recorded as Margo Cole Goossens, and your 1926 marriage license—wired East by radio at the behest of our invaluable Mr. Rummell, who must be pretty tired by this time.

"Of course, since I knew that Ann Bloomer's partner must have furnished her with the proofs of Margo Cole's identity, it was an alluring possibility that he possessed those proofs through the most plausible means in the world—marriage to Margo Cole. And it was this conjecture of mine that sent Mr. Rummell on his successful all-night, transcontinental telephone, telegraph and radio-photographic mission. Satisfied, Goossens?"

But Goossens only sank into his chair, as if the weight of his body were suddenly insupportable, and he covered his face with his trembling hands.

AND THUS it came to pass that on a certain improbably glorious day in late September Mr. Beau Rummell said to Miss Kerrie Shawn: "Well, funny-face, where do we go from here?"

"First," said Miss Shawn, "we clean up our affairs—I mean mine. You know, the estate, and all that poky business. Who's running it now, darling? Of course, Mr. De Carlos and Mr. Goossens—"

"The Surrogate will probably appoint some bank to act as trustee for the estate."

"It doesn't make much difference." Kerrie sighed. "As soon as that's settled, and the—the trial is over, we'll find ourselves forgotten, ignored and poor as churchmice."

"Poor? You're barmy!"

"Oh, didn't I tell you? We're going to be married. And then we'll live unhappily ever after. Beau Rummell, you need a shave!"

"Are we back on that marriage theme again?" growled Beau. "After all the trouble I went to to save that beautiful boodle of dough for you. Kerrie, I simply won't—"

And so, after Lloyd Goossens' trial and conviction, Mr. Rummell and Miss Shawn were married, and they began to live unhappily ever after. It was an authentic marriage this time, complete with accredited parson, verified license, the proper number of witnesses, and half the reporters in the world, who were curious to see a young woman in this crass age so out of tune with the spirit of man that she would give up "a fortune," as they unanimously expressed it, "for love."

Of course, there were gifts. Inspector Queen, who felt he owed Kerrie something, sent a set of handsome Swedish silver cutlery. Violet Day sent—silently—a beautiful Lalique flower-bowl. It took her last cent. The gifts from Hollywood were modest but legion.

Strangely, Mr. Ellery Queen sent nothing. Mr. Rummell was hurt.

"It's not the idea of the gift, y'understand," he complained to Kerrie, "but after all—"

"Perhaps he's sick, Beau."

"Say, I never thought of that!" Beau became alarmed. "I haven't seen him for days—"

G. M. C., Unions Clear Way For Labor Vote

Agreement Permits Individual Plants To Be Bargainers

Detroit, Feb. 13.—Representatives of four unions and the General Motors Corporation signed an agreement tonight which paves the way for the calling of National Labor Relations Board elections in 59 corporation plants to determine collective bargaining agents for 125,000 workers.

Signing of the agreement and filing the stipulation of terms with Horace A. Ruckel, NLRB trial examiner, cut short a hearing which otherwise would have been in lengthy session here. The case now goes to Washington.

The stipulation filed with Ruckel said, in part:

"The appropriate bargaining unit in connection with collective bargaining in the General Motors Corporation is the plant or group of related buildings operating under a common local resident manager in the same local community, producing similar or related products, or craft subdivisions within each plant as may be selected by employes therein."

The designation of the bargaining unit had been the point of contention since the hearing opened with the corporation proposing individual plants as units and the U.A.W.-C.I.O. asking grouping of the plants.

Another portion of the agreement said:

"The industrial relations staff of the General Motors Corporation will negotiate collectively with the officers of the international union certified as exclusive bargaining agency.

"This negotiation will be for those plants for which the international union has been certified . . . and on such issues as are common to all plants for which such international union has been certified. . . ."

Value of Manufactured Products in 1937 Placed at $74,107,967 in Commerce Report; Ranking Is One Place Above That of 1929

The District ranks high among counties of the Nation industrially, even when you leave out its No. 1 industry, the Government, according to a report of the Commerce Department yesterday.

The report shows that the District in 1937 stood in 137th place in the value of its manufactures among the 3,070 counties of the United States.

Total value of manufactured products turned out here was $74,107,967 in 1937, and with these the District moved one place above its place in the list in the peak prosperity year of 1929, the report said:

The report showed the following trends in manufacturing in the District in the period 1929-1937:

In 1929 the value of the District's manufactures was $38,642,562. In the next four years they showed a heavy decline and in 1933, turning point of the depression, their total value was $61,284,125, or 30.9 per cent below the prosperity level. In the same period the amount spent by manufacturers for raw materials, power, and fuel dropped 42.4 per cent from $36,200,070 to $20,859,804.

From 1933 to 1937 the value of local manufactures rose 20.9 per cent, while expenditures for raw materials and power jumped 50.8 per cent, to $31,451,162.

The report showed eight counties produced 25 per cent of the Nation's manufactures in 1937, valued at $15,350,767,000. They were: Cook County, Ill. (Chicago); Wayne County, Mich. (Detroit); New York County, N. Y.; Philadelphia County, Pa.; Los Angeles County, Calif.; Alleghany County, Pa. (Pittsburgh); Cuyahoga County, Ohio (Cleveland), and Erie County, N. Y. (Buffalo).

The second quarter of the national manufacturing total was produced in 34 counties and a third 25 per cent was concentrated in 125 other counties.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Claude Robeson directs the Rubenstein Club in its first concert of the season Tuesday evening in the Willard Hotel ballroom. Guest artist: Alfred Hopkins, tenor. Assisting artist: Eugene Kressin, barytone. Accompanist: Adele Robinson Bush.

Guests of the Rubinstein Club gathered in the Willard Hotel ballroom last evening to hear that long-established organization of women's voices in the first concert of the season under the direction of Claude Robeson. Maintaining the wonted standard of performance, the ensemble presented a varied program which began with choral arrangements of three lieder by Richard Strauss; "Caecilie," "Allerseelen" and "Staendchen." Splitting up these familiar lyrics into voice parts gave them quite an unusual aspect.

In the second group Elizabeth Henderson's "Dream Song" was contrasted with Bemet's version of Pierre Certon's "Je ne l'ose dire." The remainder of the club's offerings were arrangements, the list including Gabriel Faure's "Les Berceaux" and "Clair de Lune," Jean Faure's "Sancta Maria," Rubinstein's "Since First I Met Thee" and Ippolitov-Ivanov's "Procession of the Sardar" under the title of "Hark, O'er the Sands." In the last number Eugene Kressin provided a barytone obbligato.

Alfred Hopkins, the guest artist from New York, made three appearances on the program, beginning with the Wagnerian excerpt, "Winterstuerme wichen" from "Die Walkuere." In his first group thereafter he juxtaposed two of Henri Duparc's exquisite songs, "Chanson Triste" and "Le Manoir de Rosamonde," with one of Weckerlin's light "Bergerettes" and Massanet's fatuous "Ouvre tes yeus bleus." His final group contained Roger Quilter's "O, Mistress Mine," Winter Watts' "Blue Are Her Eyes," Laise' "Caliban in the Coal Mine," Frank Bridge's "Love Went A-Riding" and the Finnish student song, "Summer Evening."

His tenor voice was agreeable in quality but not robust enough for the heroic demands of Siegmund's aria. He made a better impression in the lyrical range, although the color of his voice had little variety in the expression of emotional shades.
